Joint Chiefs Hold Nation Should Boost Its Defenses

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

America's top military leaders have told Congress that the Army, Navy and Air Force should be strengthened in the light of the world situation today.

Testimony made public yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee shows that the Joint Chiefs of Staff believe the Nation's armed forces "from the military view point" are below the minimum strength required.

Considering other factors, however, they said they supported the present 13.3 billion dollar defense budget for 1951.

Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, put the matter this way:

"Our forces—ground, air and navy—are not sufficient now to fight a major war. Nor do we expect them to be sufficient for such a calamity by the end of fiscal year 1951.

"But I feel that we are going to achieve the necessary forces to prevent a disastrous attack from crippling this Nation. I also believe that our forces in being, and our mobilization base, will be sufficient, together with the forces and potential of friendly nations, to win a war if it comes."

Build to "Prevent Disaster"

Bradley declared the Air Force "is not as big as it might be" and made it plain that we are only building toward an over-all strength "which can prevent disaster" and strike the "retaliatory blow" that will so weaken the enemy that we then will have time to mobilize.

"I go along on this budget," he added, "and I support it because it is a sound part of the long-range program."

The other three members of the Joint Chiefs said substantially the same thing and spelled out some of the present weaknesses.

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, told the committee that the 10 divisions provided under the new budget is 2 less than what he considers necessary. Our need for modern tanks and anti-tank weapons is "critical," he declared.

46,000 Police State Tanks

He said the "police states" have a total of more than 40,000 medium and heavy tanks, while we have only 6000 "combat-worthy" light and medium tanks, all modernized versions of wartime craft.

On order in small quantities is "the best light tank in the world," Collins said, while a prototype of a new medium is ready, along with designs for a heavy. However, the latter will not be built unless some promising new anti-tank weapons believed capable of knocking out such a land monster fail to materialize, he indicated.

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, warned that intercontinental atomic bombing attacks are now a possibility and

Amboy Blast Mine Found on Train Carrying 350

Red Bank, N. J., June 9 (AP).—An antipersonnel mine from the South Amboy blast area was discovered today in the coal pile of a Pennsylvania Railroad train carrying 350 passengers.

All persons on the train were evacuated immediately as a precaution. Army officials said "fire heat or agitation" could have set off the explosive.

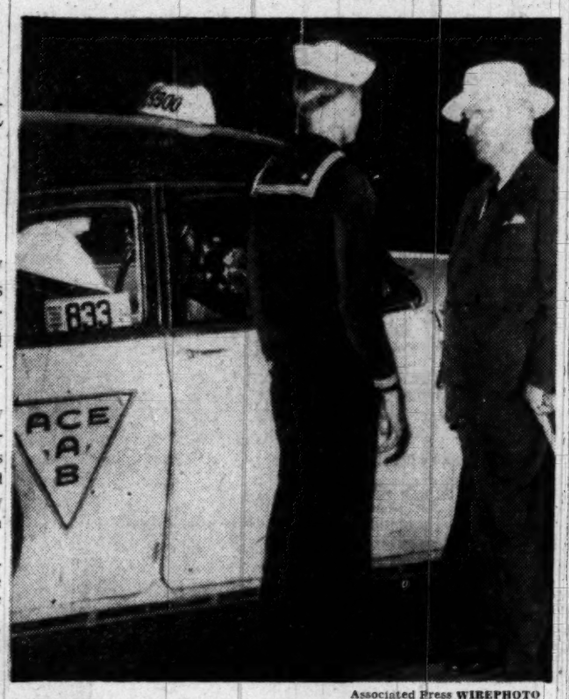
Truman Wins the Peace



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SIDEWALK SCENE—President Truman assumed the role of a peacemaker on an early morning stroll in St. Louis yesterday when he walked up to a sailor and a cab driver arguing over a fare. The President tapped the sailor on the shoulder and inquired about his decorations. The sailor, identified as Seaman William Hall, 25, of Caledonia, Mo., snapped to attention and gave the information. The driver was speechless. The President, with a grin, strolled on

European Aid To Continue, Truman Says

Columbia, Mo., June 9.—President Truman told a rain-drenched crowd here today that the United States will have to continue helping free Europe after the Marshall Plan ends in 1952.

If American assistance were cut off now, he said, it would be "disastrous" for the Marshall Plan countries and "for us too." Hence, he said, the United States must keep on working for a healthy world economy so as to thwart communism and improve the outlook for peace.

Mr. Truman spoke from a stand in the athletic stadium of the University of Missouri here. He was sheltered by a black and gold canopy, but the 12,000 out on the field and in the grandstand were not so fortunate when the rain started. It began with a sprinkle and ended in a downpour.

The undergraduates, graduates, and faculty held to their seats, despite the drenching. Once Mr. Truman had concluded, however, they made a wild dash for cover, holding up their academic gowns as they ran.

The program in the stadium was curtailed, and some of the remaining exercises were moved to Jesse Hall. Mr. Truman, wearing a raincoat over his black gown but with his mortarboard cap uncovered, stepped out in the rain, and a photographer touched off a flash bulb.

It sounded like a pistol crack.

"Must have been a Communist," said the President, grinning.

In Jesse Hall, he was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of laws and made an honorary member of Phi Beta Kappa.

This was an 18-hour day for the indefatigable Missourian. In the course of it, he intervened in an argument between a sailor and a cab driver; played the piano and some politics; rode atop an old-fashioned coach and four on the estate of August A. Busch, jr.

Mr. Truman visited the Busch estate, which embraces the farm once worked by Ulysses S. Grant, on his way back to St. Louis from Columbia. A reception there

Bradley Urges Production as Defense Aid

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 9.—Gen. Omar N. Bradley said here today, "We hope to build up our productive facilities so that no aggressor will dare attack us."

Declaring that the defense of this Nation is everybody's business, General Bradley emphasized that "our main aim is not to fight a war, but to prevent one." He spoke at the second day of the thirty-second annual convention of the D. C. Bankers Association.

Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the Defense Department, pointed out that the United States currently is facing unprecedented problems.

Previously, he added, there was a greater balance of power in the rest of the world. We were fortunate in the last war, he said, because the aggressors hit first elsewhere, giving us a chance to build up.

"It may be different next time," he grimly warned.

Also, there is a greater danger of sobotage from within than ever before. A major civil defense problem, he asserted, is the question of having the right leaders in the right places at the right time.

"Let's see," he urged, "that the things that have made this country great don't go by default . . . we spent 300 billion dollars to win the last war but we haven't yet won the peace."

The bankers also heard Franklin D. Richards, Commissioner of the

Deserter Reports Anti-Red Guerillas In the Caucasus

Berlin, June 9 (AP).—A Soviet Army deserter told the British today a guerilla war is being fought against Soviet rule in the Caucasus Mountains.

The deserter is 24-year-old Sergt. Mikhain Amurkmanovich Kuratsyev, who fled from the Soviet occupation forces in East Germany two weeks ago after returning from leave in Russia.

Gold, 2 Others Indicted In A-Bomb Spy Conspiracy

New York, June 9 (AP).—Harry Gold, 39-year-old Philadelphia chemist, and two unidentified persons, were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of feeding atom bomb secrets to the Russians.

Gold was accused of operating as an intermediary between Dr. Klaus Fuchs, the convicted British scientist, and members of a wartime Soviet A-bomb spy ring.

In addition to Gold, the indictment named "John Does, alias 'John,' and Richard Roe, alias 'Sam.'" The "true and correct names" of these persons, the indictment said, are unknown to the jury.

The unidentified "John Doe" was named as the Soviet agent who transmitted atomic secrets to Russia after allegedly having received them from Gold. Gold, in turn, was accused of getting these documents from Fuchs during a series of meetings in this country.

The indictment, by naming "Richard Roe" as a defendant in the purported spy plot, injected another mysterious figure into the alleged wartime traffic in top secret documents. There was no further indication as to his real identity.

Gold, a native of Switzerland who came to this country with his parents in 1914, was arrested in Philadelphia last May 23. He could be given the death sentence if convicted of wartime spying.

FBI agents said they traced him through leads supplied by Fuchs, now in a British prison after admitting he gave atomic secrets to the Soviets. Fuchs is the former head of Britain's atomic development program.

Remington, Facing Trial, Resigns Job

By The Associated Press

William W. Remington, 32-year-old Commerce Department economist indicted by a New York Federal grand jury for alleged perjury, resigned his $10,000-a-year post yesterday to give full attention to his forthcoming trial.

Remington, who was accused of lying when he denied ever being a Communist, said in a letter of resignation to Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer that he took the action with a "heavy heart." The resignation is effective Monday.

Fast Action Sought

"I have now come to the conclusion," Remington wrote, "that I can best vindicate myself by devoting full time to proving in the courts that I am innocent of the charges that I have ever been a Communist."

In New York, the Federal Government demanded the fastest possible trial for the handsome young official. Remington, who will be arraigned Tuesday, repeated in his letter of resignation that he is not and never has been a Communist.

Sawyer handed Remington a "quit-or-be-fired" ultimatum on May 27. He also gave one to Michael Lee, another $10,000-a-year man who heads the Far Eastern branch of the department's trade division.

Lee also refused to quit. He issued a statement yesterday challenging Sawyer to hold up his dismissal at least long enough to permit the department's loyalty board to rule on his patriotism. Otherwise, he said, he will be fired under a cloud.

In his 1200-word letter, Remington said he did not resign then because he felt he had no other alternative and because he believed Sawyer was doing " a disservice to the (Federal) loyalty program . . . by condemning me without charges or a hearing.

Compelled to Quit

"This would not have been a resignation," he added. "It would have been surrender. An innocent man does not give up that easily even when capitulation is a more comfortable course."

But now, he said, circumstances compel his resignation.

Remington's case first hit the headlines nearly two years ago when Elizabeth Bentley, self-confessed former Red courier, accused him of slipping her secrets for a Communist spy ring.

He denied the charge but was suspended from his job of screening exports to Russia. He was restored to a "nonsensitive" post in the department after the Loyalty Review Board cleared him when Miss Bentley refused to re-

Chief Firms Of Alaska Are Indicted

By The Associated Press

Attorney General McGrath yesterday announced a grand jury in Alaska has returned indictments charging anti-trust law violations in a half-dozen important business fields. He said 10 such indictments were returned, sealed, at Anchorage last Monday.

Opened yesterday before United State Judge Anthony J. Dimond, they charged price-fixing and restraints of trade in shipping, the distribution of meats, food sales, fuel supples, the liquor business, dry cleaning and taxicab service.

23 Corporations Cited

The indictments named 23 corporations, 138 individuals and two retail liquor dealers associations, all doing business in Alaska.

The list of defendants ranged from the big Alaska Steamship Co. of Seattle, Wash., to Last Chance, Inc., a retail liquor outlet at Anchorage.

Attorney General McGrath made it clear that more indictments are to come as a result of a year's investigation into what he described as "collusive arrangements among business groups which have obstructed the development and expansion of the Alaskan economy."

In a statement, the Justice Department said that Alaska Steamship Co. "virtually controls the economy of Alaska, since it is the only steamship company serving the entire territory."

Gilbert W. Skinner of Seattle, president of Alaska Steamship, was indicted along with the company.

Another of the indictments charged that Healy River Coal Corp. of Suntrana and Anchorage, Evan Jones Coal Co. of Anchorage, and Usibelli Coal Mine, Inc., of Fairbanks, maintained agreements (1) to divide the Alaskan fuel market, and (2) to fix prices at which they sell some $2,500,000 worth of coal to the United States for military establishments each year.

An alleged conspiracy to fix liquor prices throughout Alaska was charged to a large group of wholesale and retail dealers in Anchorage, Fairbanks, Ketchikan, and Seward.

One indictment alleged that meat dealers in Ketchikan had conspired to prevent others from entering into competition with them. Taxicab operators at Anchorage were accused of a similar alleged conspiracy in their line of business.

Anchorage dry cleaners were charged with raising and fixing the prices for their services.

The actions in Alaska are without precedent. A Department official asserted that "this is the first time we have made an all-out drive to clean up restraints in an entire territory at one time.

Lawyer Throws First Punch, Fells Bondsman in Court Row

ROBERT I. MILLER
MEYER WEINSTEIN
. . . they battled to a draw in a Municipal Court corridor

Attorney Robert I. Miller, 73, and bondsman Meyer Weinstein, 50, yesterday fought to no decision in an overweight title bout for the championship of Municipal Court.

Miller weighed 186, Weinstein 120. Both men wore glasses and tropical worsteds.

The feature attraction was fought in the corridor on the second floor of the court house, before 11 spectators.

Miller said the fight started over a client he had been appointed to defend.

The white-haired lawyer said he threw the first punch and knocked Weinstein to the floor. He said Weinstein got up and struck him in the face.

An unidentified policeman, Attorney William A. Tinney, jr., and bondsman Howard F. Hughes separated the men before any more blows were struck.

Weinstein could not be reached for comment. His nephew, bondsman Leonard Weinstein, said his uncle had gone to a hospital to be treated for a wrist injury incurred in the fall.

Meet at 10 A. M. Today

Negotiators Seeking Solution To Ultimatum From Union

BULLETIN

Officials of the Milk Drivers' Union agreed shortly before 2 a. m. today to call off a strike threatened for this morning against Washington area dairies. Negotiations between the union and the dairies will be resumed at 10 a. m.

A Federal mediator early this morning was trying to break a deadlock between dairy and union milk driver negotiators to avert a strike authorized by the Union membership.

Union milk drivers of nine major Washington area dairies, last night gave their officers power to call the strike at 12:01 a. m. today if the dairies failed to agree to union terms.

Union officers went directly from the strike meeting at Turner's Arena to a negotiating session with dairy representatives. The meeting began only two hours before the strike deadline.

Leaders of the union, Local 246, AFL Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Union, were given the power to call the strike this morning against "any or all" the nine dairies, depending on whether some agreed to the working hours sought Dairies involved are Alexandria, Chestnut Farms, Embassy, Harvey, Lucerne (Safeway Stores), Model Farms, Richfield, Thompson and Wakefield.

The union, which has been demanding a five-day, 40-hour week at the same wages paid for a six-day, 48-hour week under the expiring contract, last night rejected a counter-offer by the dairies before voting the strike authority.

The dairies' offer, as reported to the meeting, was for a five-day week of 44 hours, with retail home deliveries cut from every other day on each route to three days a week and no Sunday deliveries.

Harry J. Marx, president, and Eugene R. Hubbard, secretary-treasurer, of the union, declared after the meeting that if the strike was called, milk deliveries to institutions, including military installations, would be continued.

Welcomed by Judge

Probe of D.C. Juvenile Court Asked by Advisory Group

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The Juvenile Court Advisory Committee yesterday "recommended" and Judge Edith H. Cockrill "welcomed" an investigation of the court by a panel of Federal experts.

In an exchange of statements, the advisory committee urged the judge to ask for the investigation, but in her reply the judge did not say whether or not she would instigate the study. She did, however, assure her "full cooperation."

The letters were the latest developments in the Juvenile Court controversy in which two key officials resigned with the observation that Judge Corckrill was too "punitive". She has denied the charge.

The Advisory Committee, an independent organization of citizens formed soon after the present Juvenile Court was formed in 1938, met Thursday afternoon, and made public its findings yesterday.

The committee declared that "public confidence" in the court has been "seriously impaired."

The committee did commend the service of Miss Virginia Clary, the court's director of social work, and Miss Clare Fagrie, its chief probation officer. Both women resigned, effective June 30, and protested Judge Cockrill's handling of cases.

The letter said the two were commended "without undertaking to pass on the merits" of the controversy between the judge and her two aides.

Neither Miss Clary nor Miss Fagrie could be reached for comment yesterday on the committee's proposal.

In its letter to the judge, the committee, through Chairman G. Howland Shaw, wrote:

Lake Success, N. Y., June 9 (U.P.).—Secretary General Trygve Lie announced today that he had rejected a Polish request that he invite the Chinese Communists to the United Nations Technical Aid Conference opening here today.

Poland served notice that it could not take part in the conference on aid to backward areas unless the Mao Tse-tung government was invited.

Wheat Crop Way Below '49, U. S. Reports

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Crops "well below recent years" were predicted yesterday by the Government Crop Reporting Board.

The board said that on June 1 the prospects were for a total wheat crop of 945 million bushels, "the first to fall below a million bushels in seven years." Winter wheat makes up 710 million bushels of this. This is 21 million more than forecast a month ago. It is 191 million bushels less than last year. It is about 50 million bushels less than the average for the 10 years 1939-48.

The spring wheat harvest was forecast at 234 million; last year it was 245 million; the 10-year average was 273.

An indication of how serious the drought and bug infestation early this year was in the Southern Great Plains is shown in the following State reports:

Southwest Hit

New Mexico dropped from 4,572,000 bushels to only 672,000. The yield per acre in New Mexico is reported as a meager three bushels; last year it averaged 12 bushels.

Texas dropped from 103 million bushels last year to 25 million this year; and from 14½ bushels per acre to nine.

Oklahoma, which reported a 10 percent improvement during May, was still forecast at only 46 million bushels contrasted with 89 million harvested last year. Its yield dropped from 13 bushels per acre to 10.

Colorado's crop dropped from 45 million last year to 33 million, with the prospective yield dropping from 17 to 14½ bushels per acre.

All States in the Washington area showed small declines due entirely to acreage reductions.

Doctors Are Killing Diabetics Unwittingly, Specialist Warns

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Doctors trying to save diabetics from premature hardening of the arteries are slowly and unwittingly killing, blinding and maiming them, a Philadelphia doctor said here yesterday.

The blunt warning was sounded by Dr. Anthony Sindoni, jr., chief of metabolism of the Philadelphia General Hospital.

A 1927 graduate of the Georgetown University Medical School, Dr. Sindoni reported his diabetic study findings yesterday at a scientific session of the school's centennial anniversary celebration and alumni reunion.

Summing up his own report, he said too many diabetic patients are getting too much insulin for their own good. Many patients now under insulin therapy would be better off without it, and a great number of the others would live longer and be healthier on less of the drug, he said.

Present insulin dosage schedules, the diabetes specialist said, are set by the doctors so as to bring the diabetic's blood-sugar concentrations to the level of the normal (non-diabetic) person. This is being done, he said, on the unproved assumption that high blood-sugar levels lead to arterioclerosis, degeneration of the arteries.

The end result of such overdosing, he reported, is to bring about hypoglycemia (too little blood-sugar) with multiple adverse effects. Ironically, he said, these are the arteriosclerotic effects that cause blindness, gangrene in the legs or arms, and fatal heart attacks.

Control Foe Holds Floor For 12 Hours In Talkathon

Breaks in After Midnight to Seek Quorum Call; Many Absentees Sought

District Vote Set

THE HOUSE DISTRICT Committee will meet Wednesday to make its decision on extension of rent control in Washington. Page B-1.

Battle on Control

BULLETIN

At 1:30 a. m. today, the Senate sergeant-at-arms was still trying to get a quorum of sleepy-eyed Senators, after the filibuster of Senator Cain against the rent control extension bill had folded up.

Over angry GOP protests, Democratic leaders said they were determined to hold the Senate in session until they get an agreement to vote on the rent bill.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), shooting for a filibuster record, forced the Senate into a round-the-clock session early today by a one-man talkathon against extension of Federal rent control.

At midnight he had held the floor for 12 hours and 2 minutes, with time out for three brief breathers.

During two 10-minute and one 15-minute recesses, leaders on the Republican side of the aisle tried to talk him into an agreement to stop speaking and set a definite voting time on the bill. But after each recess, Cain returned to his desk and resumed his meandering speech.

At 12:06 a. m. Cain stopped talking for a quorum call.

Senator Scott W. Lucas, jr. (D., Ill.), majority leader, had served notice that he would hold the Senate in session until it voted on the bill or at least set a fixed time for voting.

Wants House to Act First

The announced purpose of Cain's filibuster was to stave off a Senate vote until the House has had an opportunity to pass on the extension. The House was set to vote next Tuesday, but House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) said it wouldn't act now in any event before the Senate showdown.

The bill would continue the Federal rent control law, expiring June 30, until December 31, 1950, and authorized local communities to continue it another six months if they choose.

Voice Croaking at Midnight

Cain's voice was croaking as midnight passed but he still kept pretty much to his rent control subject. Once or twice his speech veered to the National Open Golf championship at Ardmore, Pa.

He said he had hoped to attend it this weekend but doubted now he would be able to make it. Cain said he "knew something about golf," having shot an 80 last Sunday in The Post Celebrities Tournament.

But the Washington State lawmaker, conducting a one-man fili-

Two Jolly Chaps 'Borrow' Plane Till Gas Runs Out

What goes up must come down

Working on that theory, Maryland State police yesterday followed a plane case of theft to solve itself, in a tobacco field.

Fred Wineland, 24, civilian pilot, of 1210 Savannah st. se., reported his two-seater airplane had been stolen about 4 a. m. Thursday from the Maryland Airport at Indian Head.

Wineland, manager of the Anacostia Theater, and friends formed an air posse, vainly scouring the countryside while police did ground duty.

Toward noon yesterday a farmer near the Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, tuned in his wireless. Heard about a stolen plane. Called police. Told 'em two young fellows, seemed to be drunk, landed in his tobacco field. Left on foot when he told 'em he had no fuel for their plane.

Wineland and State troopers raced to the scene. There it was, Wineland's $3000 Aeronca, shipshape as could be, except for the litter of cigarette butts and empty beer bottles.

Police broadcast a lookout for stick-jolly jockeys, about 20 years old, one slight and with curly hair and dark complexion, both with a liquor list.

Probers Dispute Coffee Shortage

Congress Warned

Rubber Price Rise Blamed On Trading

By the United Press

The State Department has issued a warning that unjustified speculation has almost doubled natural rubber prices and is hampering United States Military stockpiling, it was revealed yesterday.

The department, noting the price is now 34 cents a pound compared with last year's average of 17½ cents, said it has portested against this "temporary phenomenon" during "friendly discussions with the governments of major producers."

It did not identify the countries, but the biggest sources of natural rubber are in British-controlled Malaya, Indonesia, French-dominated Indo-China, Burma and Ceylon.

These nations, some newly-created republics, also are hot beds of Communist underground agitation. The Kremlin's frank plans to dominate the area are deemed a serious threat to American supplies.

The department said the spiraling prices, which recently caused major United States rubber companies to increase consumer prices, might result in business losses for producing areas and thus endanger their long-term earnings.

This apparently was an indirect allusion to the war-born synthetic rubber industry in this country. The synthetic varieties now sell for the Government-pegged price of 18½ cents a pound and already have cut into natural rubber markets.

The Government owns 11 synthetic plants which are leased to private operators. House and Senate committees, aware of the stockpiling need and the cost of natural rubber, have voted to retain Government control of the plants for at least two more years.

By The Associated Press

Senators investigating the high price of coffee said yesterday there is no shortage and demanded sharp curbs on speculators.

They asked the Justice Department to go to court unless there is a prompt revision of futures contracts used in coffee speculative trading on the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

They proposed higher margins (down payments) for futures trading, and suggested Government supervision of the exchange.

They also asked the antitrust attorneys to file suit unless foreign coffee interests dispose of the stocks they hold in this country at once by putting them into channels of trade.

The inquiry, conducted by an Agriculture subcommittee headed by Senator Gillette (D., Iowa), declared coffee prices will crash if consumption in this country continues to decline because of high prices.

In a series of recommendations accompanying its report, the subcommittee sharply criticized George V. Robbins, one of the Nation's biggest coffee buyers, for "reluctant" answers and for having "deceived" it in his testimony.

Declaring that it should have cited Robbins for contempt, the group called on the Attorney General to "investigate the details of the purchase of coffee by (Robbins), from the National Coffee Department of Brazil in the year 1948 to determine if any Federal laws have been violated."

The report listed Robbins as president of the National Coffee Association and green coffee buyer for the Maxwell House Division of General Foods Corporation.

Spokesmen in New York for the Exchange and the Association withheld commend pending a look at the report, but Edwin T. Gibson, executive vice president of General Foods Corp., denied any action on the part of his company "has been a prime cause of the rise in coffee prices."

The Justice Department also was asked to have somebody on hand hereafter whenever there is a meting of "the special commission on coffee of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council, or any similar groups that meet here or in which the United States participates."

The committe, which had received tstimony that Brazilians and other South Americans reaped speculative profits that went untaxed, proposed a revision of laws to cover such profits of foreign interests.

Truman Thrills Missouri Group With Piano Solo

Columbia, Mo., June 9 (AP).—President Truman played the piano here today, an dafterward suggested with a grin that the country would be better off if he had become a professional musician.

He gave his informal recital in the home of Dr. Frederick Middlebush, president of the University of Missouri, after a cold-plate luncheon. First came Paderewski's Minuet in G, then Mozart's Ninth Sonata and finally the Jenny Lind Polka. He played this last in a duet with his sister, Miss Mary Jane Truman of Grandview, Mo.

After the 50 or so guests had applauded, the Chief Executive remarked:

"Just think how much better off the country would be if I had become a music-hall pianist."

It was Mrs. Middlebush, hostess at the luncheon, who persauded Mr. Truman to play. He sat down at the grand piano in the drawing room, and ran through the minuet and sonata. Then he motioned to Miss Truman to join him in playing the polka.

"I taught it to Mary when she was 5 years old," he said afterward.

He told also, how many years later he taught it to his daughter, Margaret Truman. He and Margaret played it at a father-daughter night at the National Press Club in December, 1948.

Buying 'Bait' Condemned by Businessmen

The Association of Better Business Bureaus yesterday adopted a resolution condemning advertisements offering rebuilt vacuum cleaners or sewing machines as "bait" to lure customers into stores where they would be sold more expensive models.

The association, in the closing session of its weeklong convention at the Shoreham Hotel, decided to hold the next annual meeting at Boston.

Three men were reelected to office. They are Victor H. Nyborg, Rye, N. Y., president; John N. Garver, Buffalo, N. Y., chairman of the board of governors, and Edward L. Green, general manager, National Better Business Bureau, treasurer.

New officers elected are Evans Stearns, Cincinnati, Ohio, vice chairman, board of governors, and John L. O'Brien, Akron, Ohio, secretary.

Aid to Continue When Plan Ends—Truman

marked the open of the reunion of his Thirty-fifth Division.

Mr. Truman added a political touch at Columbia when he invited Emery Allison, his choice for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, to ride with him to St. Louis.

The Chief Executive, who spent last night in the Jefferson Hotel after his flight from Washington, was up at 5 o'clock this morning. At 6 o'clock he was taking a walk with his Secret Service guards.

Mr. Truman mixed some Missouri politics in with his whirlwind program today. He invited Emory Allison, his choice for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, to ride with him on the way from Columbia to St. Louis.

Allison is after the seat now held by Republican Senator Forrest Donnell. First, however, he must defeat Thomas C. Hennings, jr., of St. Louis in the Democratic primary that comes August 1. Politicians out here say that Hennings will give Allison a hard fight.

At Mexico, Mo., in a talk from the rear platform of his train, the President called on an enthusiastic, flag-waving crowd of 5000 to send Allison to the Senate.

He said that Allison would "represent Missouri in the Senate as it ought to be represented." Mexico, according to legend, got its name back in the days when it was a stop on the Santa Fe Trail. A sign pointing to the southwest bore the word "Mexico," and the settlers decided to use it for the name of the town.

Mr. Truman pointed out this section of Missouri's "Little Dixie" was represented in the House by Chairman Clarence Cannon of the Appropriations Committee. He said he was the most powerful man in the House except for Chairman Robert Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, and expressed the hope that the voters of Mexico would send him back for another term.

The President recalled, too, that this district once was represented by House Speaker Champ Clark. He reminded that whistle-stop crowd of Clark's interest in education, and he pointed to his own efforts to get Federal help for education.

He said that there wouldn't be a decent road in the United States if the Federal Government hadn't helped the States in building roads.

"If we can build roads," he said, "why can't we build things for the head as well as for the feet and the wheels. And we'll do it."

It had been said in the past, he remarked, that the country was going "socialistic" in spending public money on education.

"You would think that came out of the Chicago Tribune today," he said, "but it didn't. That was published in 1830, when we were trying to get a free public school system for the children of this country."

In his speech to the graduating class of the University of Missouri, some 1800 in number, Mr. Truman said they should be congratulated because they were entering a world of greater opportunities than young people have ever had before.

"You hear a lot of talk these days to the effect that the world is full of dangers, and that our civilization is heading straight for disaster. Of course, the world is full of dangers—the world has always been full of dangers, for people in every country and at every period of history."

He said that, as gains have been made in scientific knowledge, the danger has increased that men would misuse this knowledge. But the opportunities for human advancement, he said, have become greater too.

To Avoid Disaster

"Our civilization need not wind up in disaster," he said. "It can go on to greater heights. Those who are frightened and dismayed do not have faith that men will use scientific advances for good ends. They see only the dangers in the world—not the opportunities.

"But those who understand a free society have faith that we can use our knowledge for human advancement."

Turning to this country's efforts to help its friends abroad, Mr. Truman said that the Marshall Plan had brought about remarkable gains in Europe. Nevertheless, he said, the countries so aided are not yet able to get by on their own.

"If we were to take away our assistance now," he said, "they would still be unable to afford all the things they need to buy from us and from other countries. The result would be a sudden drop in living standards, weakened defenses, and a greater opportunity for the Communists to move in.

That must not happen—it would be disastrous for the Europeans and for us too. Instead, we must keep on working to build the sound economic conditions without which there can be no security or progress for free men.

"Our work for this purpose will be largely carried on for two more years under the Marshall Plan. But our national interest in a healthy world economy will not end in 1952. It will be just as necessary then as it is today to have a secure economic foundation for world peace. This secure foundation requires not only a successful recovery fro mthe devastation of war. It requires the kind of dynamic progress which proves that the way of freedom can satisfy the economic needs of man.

Economic Well-Being

"The economic well-being of other free nations around the world is important to our common effort for peace. It is also important to our own economic well-being."

Mr. Truman said that the Marshall Plan and other foreign-aid programs can be substantially reduced this year. Obviously, he said, the United States doesn't want to continue this extraordinary financial assistance any longer than necessary. That is why, he said, plans must be made now for the changes that will be necessary in the future.

Many of those changes, the President said, can be expected to occur "naturally."

The United States, he said, will naturally import more goods than it does now, thus making more dollars available for purchases here by other countries. It should plan for larger investments abroad, he said, which will have the same effect. And it can be expected, he said, that more Americans will travel abroad in the years ahead, and leave dollars behind them.

He said that Gordon Gray, former Secretary of the Army, is now making a study to determine the extent to which we can count on such natural adjustments and the extent and character "of the other actions we should plan in order to achieve a sound and healthy flow of international trade and investment."

Mr. Truman said the United States must continue to reduce its tariff. In saying Congress ought to act on the International Trade Organization, he departed from his text to say that the proposal had been up on the hill for some time, and that he hoped the lawmakers would "act on it some day." This brought a laugh from faculty members.

Senate May Substitute Own Excise Cut Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A little-known bill on the Senate calendar, slicing war excise tax rates 628 million dollars, moved into the limelight yesterday as a possible substitute for House-snarled tax legislation.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga), disclosed that he has definitely agreed with Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) to call up the Senate measure if the House fails to act on a tax bill.

"We promised early this year that we will give Senators a chance to vote on excise tax reduction," George told reporters. "We are going to keep that pledge."

Increased possibility that the Senate will at least go through the motions of passing an excise tax cut followed another set-back in the House tax timetable.

Tentatively slated to report a bill this week, the House Ways and Means Committee adjourned over the weekend still far from a final vote and more doubtful about the outcome than ever.

"I have said that what we will do with the bill is uncertain," said Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Douhton (D., N. C.). "You can say that in capitals now."

Earlier this week George set July 1 as the latest date the House could pass a tax bill with any real prospect that the Senate will have time to vote on the same measure.

That deadline, it was said, contemplated the House committee would finally report on the bill this week, prepare a report next week, and spend the balance of June getting it through the Rules group and the House.

The committee's failure to complete the bill yesterday upset the timetable. More delays appeared ahead. The committee hasn't even considered the most controversial item in the bill — the Administration's proposal to recoup an estimated 600 million dollar revenue loss with increased corporate taxes.

The bill the Senate will throw into the gap if the House fails to act was placed on the Senate calendar nearly a year ago. The Senate Finance committee tied it to a minor House-passed revenue bill empowering the Internal Revenue Commissioner to issue subpenas in connection with industrial alcohol permits.

Known as the Johnson (D., Colo.) amendment, it repeals the war tax rates imposed by the 1943 Revenue act on jewelry, furs, toilet preparations, electric light bulbs and luggage. Other provisions cut the tax on admissions, transportation of persons, telephone, telegraph and radio messages and photographic apparatus.

If the bill is called up in the Senate, George predicted it will be substantially amended, probably by increasing the excise exemptions, "but I would do all in my power to hold down the revenue loss."

George conceded the bill wouldn't solve the tax tangle, since the House committee traditionally shelves tax action initiated in the Senate.

"But we are committed to make the effort if the House fails to send over a bill," said the Georgian.

The bogged down House bill cuts excises a total of 1.1 billion, nearly double the Johnson amendment slash, and plugs some "loopholes" in an unsuccessful effort to offset the cut.

But it fails to plug some of the biggest loopholes, notably oil depletion allowances, and doesn't even make a start toward the billion dollars in additional revenue the President asked. Feeling that a veto is inevitable, many members have lost interest in the measure.

Before adjourning over the week-end, the committee ratified a few loophole amendments, most of them highly technical. Here's what the committee did yesterday:

1. Voted to impose a 30 per cent capital gains tax on the profits aliens make from speculation or investments in American markets or property. Estimated revenue yield three million dollars.

2. Approved amendments designed to prevent short sales from being used as a device to promote long-term capital gains. Revenue pick-up, $2,000,000.

3. Ratified previous action permitting businesses that lose money in one year to offset the loss for tax purposes against profits made a year back or during any of five future years.

4. Decided to eliminate a provision in the present estate tax law permitting a deduction for the support of dependents.

4. Exempted gifts made by an individual more than three years prior to his death from inclusion in his gross estate for tax purposes. Where gifts were made within three years of an individual's death, a showing that they were not made "in contemplation of death" would exempt them from inheritance taxes.

McCarthy Renews Attack on Acheson

Forrestal Role?

Secret Diary In Amerasia Case Sought

Concern over the 1945 Amerasia case—stolen secret Federal documents in the possession of a magazine with Communist connections—continued high yesterday with new charges and investigations.

There were these developments:

1. Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) demanded in the Senate that the White House open up the long sealed diary of the late Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal, to see if it would throw light on an alleged order to "go slow" on arresting the suspects in the Amerasia case. A Justice Department official testified to a Senate subcommittee that Forrestal issued such an order, but that it was countermanded by the White House in two days.

2. In a speech at Indianapolis, Senator Capehart (R., Ind.), said he would ask the Senate to authorize a full investigation of the activities of the Justice Department in the prosecution of the Amerasia case. He said the present subcommittee, looking into charges by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), did not have adequate powers to do it. It is, nevertheless, now making a study of that affair.

3. Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), disputing a statement of Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the present subcommittee, said the documents taken in the case included "a very large number important to national security." Tydings had indicated that most of the papers were of little importance.

4. In New York, a grand jury investigating espionage continued to press its study of the Amerasia case, hearing testimony from several witnesses connected with the matter. There were some indications that it was a "runaway jury," in taking up the case without the sanction of Federal authorities. A highly placed informant said "Washington isn't too happy" about the grand jury's action in going into the case.

5. In New York, O. C. Doering, Jr., former executive officer of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), issued a statement denouncing testimony by a top Justice Department official on the part played by OSS in the Amerasia incident.

Doerning said there was "no foundation" for the Justice Department official's contention that because OSS agents raided Amerasia magazine without a search warrant, it "overthrew the whole prosecution."

6. Archbold Van Beuren, former OSS agent, spent two hours in a closed-door session with the Tydings subcommittee yesterday forenoon. Van Beuren, who has been critical of the committee's handling of the inquiry, declined to discuss his testimony with newsmen.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) and the State Department were back at it yesterday for another round of trading blows.

The State Department's punch was delivered by the mimeograph machine. McCarthy's was in a speech, and won a tremendous ovation from the crowd, the Wisconsin Republican convention.

McCarthy, on his home grounds, demanded the firing "this very day" of Secretary of State Dean Acheson, whom he called the "Red Dean of Fashion."

For its part, the State Department put out another one of its "McCarthy said . . . but these are the facts" documents, this one relating to his charge earlier this week that the FBI concluded there were 106 Soviet agents and pro-Communists in the department in 1946.

The department's statement recalled that the Wisconsin Republican began his campaign by saying he knew names of 205 Communists in the department, then 57, then 81, then that he would stand on one case, and now that he had 106 names, but that he has so far failed to show one.

"His numbers change; his credibility does not," the statement dryly concluded.

Blamed for Red Success

McCarthy's attack yesterday on Acheson, at Milwaukee, claimed the Secretary "worked on the team of world strategy to create a Red China and a Red Poland."

McCarthy devoted a large part of his speech to criticism of a 90-million-dollar American loan to Communist Poland in 1946, at a time when Acheson's former law firm was handling Poland's business in this country. Acheson was then Undersecretary of State.

"Fifty million of that 90 million went to equip and arm the Communist army and the dreaded U. B.—the Communist secret police just then being set up in Poland," McCarthy said.

From that McCarthy drew the conclusion that "it was Mr. Acheson who placed the guns, the whips, the black-snakes and the clubs in the hands of those Communists. It was Mr. Acheson who furnished them with bullets to keep a Christian population under Soviet discipline. It was Mr. Acheson who helped put uniforms on the masters of prostrate Poland."

He received a thunderous, standing ovation when he appeared and, after he finished, was mobbed for 10 minutes by well-wishers and autograph seekers. His speech was interrupted 19 times by applause, some of it heavy, press association reports from Milwaukee noted.

The State Department's document addressed itself to a speech McCarthy made to the Senate Tuesday. He declared that in unprecedented action, the FBI was so "disturbed" it made an evaluation of the situation at the State Department, and submitted a graph showing 20 "agents" on the rolls, plus scores of Communists, sympathizers and suspects. Three of the "agents" were still employed in "high positions," McCarthy said.

One in Department

The Department's reply was that the chart was not made by the FBI; that of the 20 persons classed as "agents," one, not three, still works for the Department, not in a high position, and that he has had an FBI and departmental tell-to-breakfast loyalty examination and review.

The chart that McCarthy referred to was not made by the FBI, the statement said, but by a Department security investigator. Subsequently, a departmental subordinate administrative officer wrote a report from the chart. That officer is still employed; an interview with him disclosed he was under the mistaken impression that the chart was prepared by the FBI, the statement declared.

The Department's reply argued that since the FBI did not make the chart, it obviously had not departed from precedent to make an "evaluation." And for the same reason, it was "pure fantasy" to say that the FBI was "seriously disturbed."

Russia to Dispute All Foreign Claims To Antarctic Area

Russia notified the State Department yesterday it will dispute American and other claims to strategic areas in the frozen Antarctic which may contain uranium, coal, iron and oil deposits.

It was understood seven other nations laying claim to Antarctic lands received similar notification.

Official said the Russfan note restated claims to areas lying directly south of Cape Horn in South America. It emphasized earlier Russian statements that no international settlement of Antartic sovereignty would be valid without Russia approval.

The note mystified Department officials. They said this country had made no move to settle the Antarctic question since 1948, when a conference proposed by the United States was turned down by France, Britain, Norway, Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, and Chile. All have claims in the Antarctic.

Russia claims are based on explorations made in 1820 by Capt. Fabin von Bellingshausen, a German in the service of Czar Alexander I.

Writers Go to Jail . . .

. . . FOR CONTEMPT—John Howard Lawson (left) and Dalton Trumbo, Hollywood movie writers, headed for a year's imprisonment in jail when their commitment was ordered by District Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday. They received the sentence for refusing to tell Congress if they were Communists

Two Hollywood Writers Begin One-Year Terms for Contempt

Two Hollywood writers went handcuffed together to jail yesterday to begin one-year sentences for refusing to tell Congress whether they ever were Communists.

The two, John Howard Lawson and Dalton Trumbo, were among ten screen figures who defied the House UnAmerican Activities Committee. The others go to trial this month.

The jailed pair, convicted of contempt of Congress and given the heaviest sentences the court could impose, also must pay $1000 fines. However, there remained a chance of their winning a reduction of sentence.

The two fought for two years to show that Congress had no right to inquire into their political beliefs. But the Supreme Court refused to review their appeal. It thereby left intact the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals here, which wrote:

"So that there maty be no mistake, we expressly hold herein that the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities has power to inquire whether a witness subpenaed by it is or is not a member of the Communist Party or a believer in Communism."

The lower court said further that Congress can curb the right of free speech or the right to remain silent "when legislating to avert what it believes to be a threat of substantive evil to national defense."

In a joint news conference, the two men held before going to court today, Lawson said:

"We charge that we are imprisoned as part of the plan of big business and its political henchmen in Washington to start a third war." Both contended that their convictions violated the bill of rights.

Lawson, a former president of the Screen Writers Guild and author of such screen scripts as "Blockade" and "Sahara," appeared before Federal Judge Edward M. Curran for final sentencing.

Trumbo went before Federal Judge David A. Pine. Their lawyers urged probation, or substantial cuts in their penalties.

Curran, noting he had 60 days to act on their motions, said he would let them know his decision. Court officials said that after he had sent Lawson to jail, the court could not order probation but could reduce sentence.

Pine denied both probation and sentence reduction motions but said that the request for a sentence change could be renewed within 60 days.

Trumbo, who wrote the screen version of the hit, "Thirty Seconds over Tokyo," and Lawson were accused before the House Committee in 1947 of having been Reds. Copies of what were described as Communist Party registration cards for them were produced.

Judge Pine said the committee record indicated Trumbo's attitude was "wilful, flagrant, defiant, evasive." Pine added that the record of his trial "disclosed no change in that attitude."

Attorneys for the two men described them as patriotic American family men with children.

The cases of the remaining eight Hollywood defendants were deferred pending outcome of the court fight of Lawson and Trumbo.

The eight agreed to accept the law held binding in the Lawson-Trumbo case, and to face trial here without a jury on the basis of the record. Their trials have been set for June 20, 21 and 22.

The eight are Alvah Bessie, Albert Maltz, Samuel Ornitz, Herbert Biberman, Edward Dmytryk, Adrian Scott, Ring Lardner, jr., and Lester Cole.

U.N. in Offer To No. Korea

Seoul, June 9 (AP).—The United Nations Commission on Korea today offered to meet Saturday with delegates of the Communist North to discuss the Reds' plan for a "general election" in all Korea.

It was unlikely the Commission's broadcast offer would be accepted. The North Korean broadcast yesterday said the Commission would be excluded from any part in the "general electon."

The radio at Pyongyang, Communist capital, today said three envoys had been named to take the appeals for a national election to the border.

President Syngman Rhee's South Korea Government denounced the Red offer as "poppycock propaganda."

Pyongyang proposed that an eigthth-day national election be held beginning August 5 to elect a "unified supreme legislative organ" for all Korea.

German Reds Warned About West Radio

Berlin, June 9 (AP).—Communist governments in East Germany and Hungary took new steps today to black out radio programs and news from the Western countries.

The party organ Neues Deutschland, called for intensification of the "fight against listening to the (Western) anti-Democratic radio." The paper said it wasn't safe even for true Communists to listen to all broadcasts or hear Western news on an academic basis.

In Budapest, the Red regime ordered mass production of "people's sets" designed to pick up only Hungarian and Soviet broadcasts.

Both measures were directed primarily against the United States State Department's Voice of America programs and those of the British Broadcasting Corp.

The paper said the Communists "for some time now have conducted an effective fight against listening to the anti-Democratic radio" but this must be intensified also within the party ranks. The American station in Berlin, RIAS, was called especially dangerous.

Two electric firms in Hungary have been ordered to mass produce the "people's radio set," capable of tuning in only Communist-controlled stations, cutting the effectiveness of the Voice of America programs.

Diplomatic sources reported a new wave of spy hysteria in Hungary, such as already has swept Poland, Czechoslovakia and Romania.

Hundreds of Hungarians were reported arrested on suspision of sabotage or spying. The death sentence threatens any persons caught photographing any installations such as bridges, factories and railway stations.

Western Allied officials declared the attempts to isolate the East Germans and Hungarians are part of an over-all Soviet policy for Eastern European satellites.

India Dock Riot Quelled

Bombay, India (Saturday), June 10 (AP).—Three hundred armed police today broke up an attempt by 1500 dockers to storm the dock area. Many persons were reported injured. Six were arrested. Police said the trouble grew out of demands for a wage bonus.

Epidemic Hits in Leipzig

Berlin, June 9 (U.P.).—The west Berlin newspaper Der Tag said today 880 persons have been stricken with typhoid in Soviet-occupied Leipzig. The outbreak was reported caused by canned horsemeat sold in state-operated "free shops."

Invasion Hinted

Soong Shuns Formosa, Quits Chiang

Taipei, Formosa, June 9 (AP).—T. V. Soong has quit Nationalist China's ruling party rather than return to Formosa where his sister, Mme. Chiang, and brother-in-law, Chiang Kai-shek, vow to make a death stand.

Soong

The millionaire former Premier's decision was announced today by the Central Executive Committee of the party, the Kuomintang.

The announcement came at a black hour for the Nationalists. Rumors flew that the Communists would invade this last retreat of Generalissimo Chiang early in July.

Press dispatches reported heavy Communist troop movements from central and south China toward the southeast coast. This is the invasion base for the venture across 100-mile-wide Formosa Strait.

Last March 25 the Kuomintang thretatened to oust Soong unless he returned to Formosa. At that time he was reported in New York.

High on the list of Chinese Communist "war criminals," Soong left China in the spring of 1949 and reached Paris in May. His secretary said he had gone abroad for a rest.

Last November the Nationalists named him and wealthy brother-in-law, H. H. Kung, as committee to sell Chinese war bonds abroad. Kung also was reported in New York.

Only bright side in the Nationalist news was a report the Communists are being starved out of the Wanshan Islands, off the south coast near Hongkong.

Bandits Get $1500 Payroll

Greenburgh, N. Y., June 9 (U.P.).—Two armed bandits overtook a car carrying a $1500 payroll today, flagged it to a stop, took the money and escaped.

U. S. Troops in Japan Warned To Be Ready for Any Attack

Tokyo (Saturday), June 10 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of United States occupation troops, today called Premier Joseph Stalin and his fellow Kremlin leaders "political bandits."

The American Army in Japan, Walker said, must be ready to crush any force which attempts to encroach upon American principles of justice and government.

Walker made his blunt speech to his troops at a parade on the sixth anniversary of the activization of his Eighth Army—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's occupation force.

As he spoke, Japanese police conducted a mushrooming series of raids against Japanese Communists and pro-Communists chiefly in Tokyo and Osaka, Japan's second largest city.

Some leftist leaders of national promise have been arrested, others have been questioned and documents have been seized in raids on offices of Communist and leftist labor union leaders.

Marxists, Walker said, preach that American capitalism must be destroyed. But capitalism is just another name for wealth, he said, and exists in Russia as well as the United States with this exception:

"In Russia the wealth of the nation is in the hands of 14 men in the Kremlin, while in the United States it is more widely distributed among the people than in any other nation on earth."

The present status of troop training is entirely satisfactory, Walker said, but complacency would be dangerous.

"Our mission now is to achieve a degree of combat readiness that will not only discourage any aggressor but will crush any who attempt to encroach upon those principles of justice and government which we stand ready to defend," he declared.

By Richard L. Coe

THAT NEW ENGLAND case about a courageous warden of a woman's prison whom politicians tried to force out of office, is suggested by Warner's new picture, "Caged."

There is a sincerity and purposefulness to this Warner release that manages to overcome a tendency to include too much detail. While it is overlong, it is a flaw that comes from the cares of indignation.

Only a minute percentage of us are in the position to know whether "Caged" overstates its case— that our prisons for women do more harm than good. Writer Virginia Kellogg spent several months in four such prisons gathering the material for the screen play she wrote with Bernard C. Schoenfeld, and one assumes she has not knowingly overstated the case.

We are concerned with a 19-year-old woman whose husband was killed while holding up a gas station. She is confined for up to 15 years as an accessory. Her baby is born in the prison and she has no family to take him, so he is sent out to a foundling home. After 10 months of good behavior she is up before a parole board, but it turns down her appeal for freedom on the ground that she is too young to be able to fend for herself.

The prison cannot possibly be any help to her rehabilitation. The guard of her cage is a vicious woman who takes what money she can from her 60 women for extra services and she holds her job by political blackmail. The women range from shoplifters and loonies to prostitutes and murderers and their hard cynicism is bound to be transmitted to so young a woman.

The warden of the prison has an uhill fight, struggling with dishonest guards within, official chicanery without and public apathy and ignorance elsewhere. After the dispossessed mother has finally decided to accept the help of a vice queen in obtaining parole, the warden sadly orders her staff to keep the parolee's file on the active list: "She'll be back."

This ending is the real force of the picture; the woman's future is all too clear.

Some Weaknesses

It is, however, too long in coming and the total blackness which surrounds the heroine is too black to be credible. Her loss of her son can hardly be as pat as it seems and the way he is forgotten is not believable.

Another fundamental flaw is the same one which badgers many pictures: the leading character has no family except a pitiful old mother, no friends on the outside. This common aloneness of most movies would be hard to overcome, but in such a picture as this, it makes the heroine's problem too specialized, the Fates too evidently stacked against her.

The performances, lines and direction are good. Eleanor Parker, a bit old for a 19-year-old and at times too carefully photographed, plays with understanding sincerity if not with emotional ability, and Agnes Moorehead, for once in a sympathetic role, is fine as the stymied warden. Betty Garde is splendid as a dethroned queen of the pen and Hope Emerson is rudely vicious as the wicked guard. Gertrude Michael, long off the screen, has some good scenes as a balmy Georgia girl.

The tone is toward the realistic and generally, effectively so.

"HARVEY" now joins the Olney parade, which leaves only the final September week unsettled . . . The Mary Chase rabbit will be seen by Stuart Erwin and Mildred Natwick the week of July 11 . . . Erwin recently switched from movies to the stage for the short-lived musical, "Great to Be Alive," and Millie Natwick, with a prodigious variety of stage and screen roles behind her, is certainly one of the theater's finest.

TONIGHT brings the finals of Riverside Stadium's first annual District high school talent search at the roller rink at 9:30 . . . Most of the youngsters have appeared in school plays and on radio and TV; a boy and girl winner will be chosen from these nine finalists: Gene Murphy and Catherine Pearson, Eastern; Ronnie Wollman's orchestra and Lorraine Calucci, Tech; Patricia Sherzer, Anacostia; Jeannette Branin, Central; Pete Horn, Western; Bruno Vasta, Woodrow Wilson, and Dooley Stephanos, Roosevelt . . . Ben Simpson, 15-year-old hillbilly lad of 4323 Fourth st., will be a guest performer, already booked for a night spot date.

GLEN ECHO'S pool is where some lads and lassies of "Brigadoon" have been spending their free afternoons . . . The musical closes tonight at the Gayety after selling out during its final performances . . . The incomparable Herblock was well sold on it Thursday night and Impresario Pat Hayes will loudly, if belatedly, sing its praises on his Sunday afternoon radio show on WQQW.

NATS COACH Nick Altrock, the team and Mrs. Clark Griffith will host 400 children from 10 Washington organizations this morning at an advance screening of "The Jackie Robinson Story" at the Dupont . . . The picture opens at both the Dupont and the Little Wednesday.

CUB SCOUTS of Pack 240 are presenting a minstrel show tonight at 7:45 in the Westbrook School auditorium.

The Individual Performances Shine in Alliance's New Play

THAT THE AREA'S amateur players have taken a wise step forward in the Washington Theater Alliance of five little theater groups is suggested by individual performances in "Power Without Glory," which tonight closes a brief run at the Arlington Farms recreation center.

This is not to say that "Power Without Glory" is a completely satisfying play or that its production is without fault. But the drama of a murder's effect on a small family offers a handful of good parts and the players form as satisfactory a cast as amateur theaters are likely to present.

Michael Clayton Hutton's play ran in London over a year before the Shuberts and John C. Wilson brought it to New York for but 31 performances. Director Carl Eardly of the Alliance has given it an American setting.

The reason, it seems to me, rests largely in Eardly's slow-paced direction. The performers he has to work with have a better-than-average projection of lines and character individually, but the over-all skill at wielding them into a crackling unit has been missing. I do not know what changes the director made in transferring his setting, but since he did so much, it is a pity he did not pull both script and performances more tightly together.

The story concerns two brothers, their parents, sister and a girl at first engaged to one brother, now in love with the other. The mother's favorite and the girl's beloved is a weakling and when he beats a neighborhood tart who claims she is carrying his child, she is left for dead. The youth who has lost his girl to his brother is granted a chance at protecting her love. It is his "Power Without Glory."

Evelyn Hinman is very good as the mother and Betty Caldwell scores with her vital treatment as the sister who learns the truth. Jean Anne Bartlett is the girl, with James Elward and Paul Carmi the two brothers. All have individual styles and skills which would seem far better under more shrewd direction.

The Fairlington Players, the Alexandria Little Theater, the Foundry and Bigby Players are represented in the cast, with the Montgomery Players programmed as backstage associates. The Falls Church Community Theater completes the alignment.

It is good to see that the players have gotten together on a joint production and one looks forward to the next Alliance venture.—R. L. C.

Bomb Kills 1, Wounds 23

Divorcee Given 7-Year Term in Abortion Death

Bedford, Va., June 9 (AP.)—Mrs. Darha Louise Fulton pleaded guilty today at Redford County Circuit Court to a charge of abortion, involuntary manslaughter and larceny and was sentenced by Judge Charles E. Burke to seven years' imprisonment.

The charges against the Bedford divorcee stemmed from the death of 24-year-old Alive Marie Taylor, a Roanoke Veterans Administration filing clerk, whose body was found on Brush Mountain near Blacksburg on March 24.

Mrs. Fulton was sentenced to serve seven years on the abortion charge, two years on the manslaughter count and one year for larceny.

Baltimore Mayor Issues Warning on Red Front Petition

Baltimore, Md., June 9 (U.P.)—Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro warned residents today against signing "phony" peace petitions circulated by Communist Front organizations.

He said he had information the petitions would appear in about 10 days. A New York newspaper also reported one million of the forms would be passed out in that city then. Other cities will be included in the plan, the paper said.

Real purpose of the petitions, D'Alesandro said, is to "create an impression that Russia is anxious for peace."

Rather than sign the forms, he suggested "we should get up petitions of our own and send them to Joseph Stalin."

Civil Defense Talks Conclude for Present

3 Dead, 4 Missing

Own Gunner Shot Down Lost B-29

Sculthorpe, England, June 9 (AP).—The pilot of a United States Air Force B-29 lost in the North Sea said today the plane was set afire by bullets from one of its own guns.

The big bomber blazed into the water during routine gunnery practice Wednesday night 23 miles off Great Yarmouth, on the Norfolk coast of England.

Four of the 11 crewmen were rescued, three bodies found and four still are missing.

Capt. Henry J. Walsh, the plane's commander, told reporters a rare failure of the plane's automatic contour fire control happened on a shooting run over a British firing range.

(United States Air Force headquarters in Washington could recall no similar instance of a modern warplane's being shot down by its own gunner.

(Safety mechanisms failed in some instances in wartime, but a check of records showed no loss of planes through such failures.)

The fire control device normally makes it impossible for a gunner to shoot his own plane.

The 50-caliber machineguns on B-29s are triggered by a kind of electromagnet known as a solenoid. When the ballers are pointing at any part of the aircraft, an automatic device cuts off electric power, thus silencing the guns.

Walsh said the device failed on the forward upper turret. Bullets from the twin machineguns ripped into the right outboard engine and it puffed into flame.

The Air Force listed the crew members aboard the bomber as:

Dead:

S/Sergt. Earl K. Brandeberry, Fort Meyers Beach, Fla.; Capt. Ladislow E. Vessel, Keewatin, Ky.; 1st. Lieut. Orrin C. Patterson, Galveston, Tex.

Missing:

S/Sergt. William C. Creech, Loyall, Ky.; S/Sergt. Merle Efi Clausen, Eugene, Oreg.; S/Sergt. James N. Fowler, Orange, Tex.; S/Sergt. Wilson A. Moser, Catawba, N. C.

Survivors:

Captain Walsh, Fairfield, Calif.; 1st Lieut. James W. Sullivan, Baton Rouge, La.; S/Sergt. Warren J. Ebert, Minneapolis; S/Sergt. Charles F. Allen, Derry, N. H.

St. David's Picnic Today

St. David's Society will hold its annual picnic at 2:30 p. m. today in Grove No. 25 of Rock Creek Park.

A week-long series of discussions, representing the second step in formation of a civil-defense plan for the District, closed yesterday with a final session at the District Building.

Attended by Government and District officials, the meetings were sponsored by the National Security Resources Board as a preliminary step in District and national civil defense planning. All sessions were closed. But District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young summed up the civil-defense situation here in these general terms:

Agencies that must play a part in civil defense—such as utilities, medical groups, fire, police and water departments—have submitted reports on what they could and must do in an emergency like an atomic bombing.

These reports were submitted this week for discussion and criticism by Government experts in the field.

Next step, said General Young, will be to revise and expand the reports in the light of suggestions made at the meetings, and then to coordinate them into one civil-defense plan.

Washington, along with Chicago and Seattle, is being used as a guinea pig in the civil-defense field. Eric Biddle, consultant on civil-defense planning to the chairman of the National Security Resources Board, said these three cities will be asked to work out plans that could be used to guide other cities. Washington is first of the three.

Biddle emphasized that each city must form a plan to fit its particular needs. But NRSB expects certain "standard patterns" to be found in these three cities that will apply everywhere, he said.

The District has been working for three months on an "interim" plan that can be used if an emergency arises before a permanent organization is established. Young had no estimate on when it might be completed.

"But if an atomic bomb were dropped on the city tomorrow," he said, "we would be in a better situation to cope with the emergency than we were three months ago. A lot of key people know what to do."

Teachers' Institute To Be Held June 11-24

American University's fourth annual institute for teachers of government and administration will be held from June 11 to 24.

The institute's schedule will include conferences with Government officials, Congressmen, newspapermen, lobbyists, and diplomatic representatives, and special visits to congressional committee hearings and other similar activities.

No Crime Overlord In U.S., Kefauver Says

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday he believed a number of crime rings were operating in the United States rather than one big-scale syndicate headed by a "national crime overlord."

Kefauver, who heads the Senate's special $150,000 crime investigation, said preliminary inquiries indicated that some of the rings are "intertwining and overlapping," but others are "essentially separate in actual function.

His statement tended to confirm the testimony of Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, who told a Senate Commerce Subcommittee recently that he had no knowledge of a national crime syndicate.

McGrath later ordered U. S. Attorneys General all over the Nation to send in lists of criminals in their areas, along with any information that might indicate links with other underworld characters. That information now is being analyzed.

Kefauver discussed his investigation in a recorded radio interview with Representative Stephen young (D., Ohio). He promised the committee will not conduct "a political whitewash or a political inquisition."

Asked about Kansas City, Mo., where Republicans claim there is an "unholy alliance" between crime and politics, Kefauver said the committee will not "shy away" from there. But he said it will hold hearings only if staff investigators dig up "enough to warrant them."

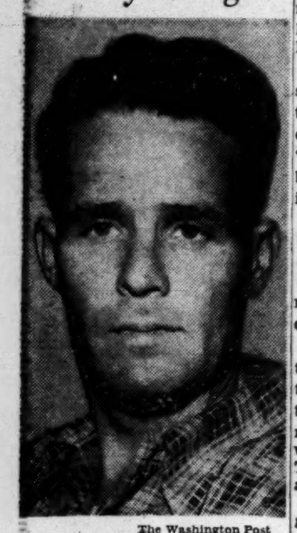
He already has indicated the committee will follow a policy of swooping down without warnings on cities where it feels an inquiry is justified.

That was the pattern it followed some three weeks ago when it made a quickie trip to Miami and questioned a flock of witnesses behind closed doors.

Kefauver also revealed that lots of plain hard work is going into the inquiry. For example, he said, committee employes are putting together a master card index including the names of all criminals it uncovers.

The first names placed in the index were the 800 members of an alleged narcotics ring whose identities were provided by Federal Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger. The New York grand jury which recently indicted gambler Frank Erickson, supplied others, he said.

'Dapper Dan' Faces Robbery Charges



The Washington Post
HUBERT COUNCIL
. . . returned from New York

Hubert Council, 36, was arraigned on five housebreaking charges yesterday after being trapped by his own blond hair and handsome mien.

Police said Council lifted several hundred dollars in cash and jewelry from nine homes in Fairfax Village in a bold daylight foray May 22.

He was tracked to the New York home of a brother on the description of women in the Fairfax Village area of a handsome stranger, with curly blond hair, tall and ever so well dressed.

Detective Sergts. John J. Fitzpatrick and Leon L. Frost riffled through police pictures and the women who had seen the stranger May 22 identified Council.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence continued the arraignment until June 21, holding Council under $12,500 bond.

Council was jailed in June, 1946, for robbing a 73-year-old man of $2 and his car keys. A year later, he and a friend drew up a habeas corpus writ, which was turned down in the District Court, but was granted by the District Court of Appeals.

Group Urges Court Probe

mously at the recommendations that you should ask the Children's Bureau of the Social Security Administration, the Administrative Office of the United States Courts and the Department of Justice each to appoint a competent person to constitute a committee to study carefully the existing policies and administrative practices of the court and in due course to report its findings to you and through you to the community.

"The committee was strongly of the opinion that only by such a move on your part could the confidence of the community in the court be restored and it is unnecessary to point out that without that confidence, the court cannot serve the community with anything approaching maximum efficiency."

Aftter receiving the letter, Judge Cockrill gave this statement to the press:

"I shall welcome an objective evaluation of the Juvenile Court policies and practices in accordance with the suggestion of the advisory committee. I have always invited suggestions and constructive criticism for the betterment of the court from the committee and interested members of the public. My full cooperation is assured in such a study.

"The admission of visitors to the court has been through the director of social work, and the announcement of any policy in this connection should, I believe, be deferred pending study of the entire situation by the suggested committee."

The judge's statement about "visitors" was apparently in reply to a portion of Shaw's letter saying that the judge had told him on June 2 that she would "welcome" members of the committee at sessions of the court.

Meanwhile, Judge Cockrill refused to make public the case histories of the six boys she committed to the National Training School for Boys without the recommendation of either probation officer or Board of Public Welfare social worker. She had said that the other 104 delinquents sent to the reformatory between August 1, 1949, and May 31, 1950, were committed with their advice.

The 110 were out of the total 1219 cases heard by the court during the period.

As to her statistics, Shaw wrote before seeing them: "I did not feel that the statistics of commitments to correctional institutions which, it is understood, you are now having assembled would prove conclusive."

Whether the suggested investigation will ever be held was undetermined last night, with Judge Cockrill declining to state whether she will herself ask for the probe.

Shaw commented: "The next step is up to the judge."

Officials of all three agencies involved said that a formal request will have to be sent them before they will act on it.

However, Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau, said that she was "very eager" to help the court in any way possible.

Ambrose Jury May Complete Work Monday

The grand jury investigating the $630,000 stamp scheme of Harold F. Ambrose will meet again Monday, perhaps for the last time, a Justice Department spokesman said yesterday.

The jury has met on six occasions, and heard testimony from more than 25 witnesses, including big-time gamblers Joe donis and Frank Erickson.

Jerry Kluttz of The Washington Post, testified briefly Thursday. Kluttz said he invested approximately $21,000 with the former special assistant to Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson, and was paid back approximately $25,000.

Assistant U. S. Attorney John W Fihelly has said that Ambrose "admits his guilt" in promising investors a 50-percent profit on resale of stamps e said he could buy because of his position.

Boston Police Hold D. C. Theft Suspect

A gnome-like youth who was arrested in Boston for the holdup of an airlines ticket office—then tried to commit suicide—has confessed to robbing the Northwest Airlines here of $101 on April 22, Boston police reported yesterday.

Washington police said a detective will be sent to Boston to question the suspect, identified as William Ainsley, 19, of Columbus, Ohio.

He was arraigned Thursday in Boston Municipal Court on charges of assault with intent to rob, armed robbery, assault with intent to murder while armed and carrying a weapon without authority.

Struck Same Place Again

The Boston charges stemmed from two robberies of the Northeast Airline's ticket office in the Hotel Statler of Boston, on April 15 and against last Tuesday night.

On Tuesday night, a man identified later as Ainsley held out a paper bag and told the lone woman clerk: "I'll give it to you if you don't fill up this bag with the dough."

The clerk, Laura E. Pearson, 30, unaware Ainsley carried a .25-caliber revolver, ran into the hotel lobby, screaming for help.

Scores of persons pursued the fleeing man. A cab driver lunged for him—and was shot by the robber through thet shoulder.

The condition of the cabbie, Albert F. White, 37-year-old father of three children, was not critical.

Captured After Struggle

Police captured Ainsley after a struggle in which he kicked one officer several times and tried to bite another.

Before court arraignment Thursday, Ainsley attempted suicide in his cell. He tied a shirt around his neck and was pulling both ends of the knot when an officer entered the cell. He did not require medical care.

Officers had to support him to prevent his fainting.

Boston police said he admitted robbing the Northwest Airline office in Washington, 1510 H st. nw., at 3:30 p. m. on April 22 of $101.34 in cash and $594.84 in checks. He said he tore up the checks.

Threatening Note

Miss Lennie Dretzka, 25, of 2829 28th st. nw. had reported that on April 22 a slight man slapped a small paper in front of her. "Don't move. This is a stickup," the paper read. The bandit, holding a revolver, scooped up the cash and checks and fled, after locking the woman in a back room.

Washington police said they would also question Ainsley in connection with the $151 holdup of Trans-World Airline's ticket office here at 745 15th st. nw. on May 26. The gunman, who answered the description of the robber in the other Washington airline robbery, missed $4000.

Dies in Ambush

Golf Champ Found Slain; Suitor Hunted

Pontiac, Mich., June 9 (U.P.).—A champion woman golfer was slain from ambush early today as she returned from a date.

Mrs. Clark

Police believed a jealous suitor killed Mrs. Thelma Clark, 39-year-old brunette divorcee and city golf champion, and wounded her companion and mother.

The suitor was identified as Lloyd Gesch, 47, a quiet, moody contractor who had been dating Mrs. Clark. He appeared at a friend's home after the shooting and said he planned to kill himself. Police searched for his body in woods nearby.

Mrs. Clark was killed as she returned from an evening with Charles Moore, 38. Moore said Gesch stepped from bushes by Mrs. Clark's front porch. He was carrying a deer rifle and fired without warning, the auto salesman said.

Moore thought Gesch was shooting at him and he sped away in his car to call police. A second shot plowed into Moore's auto, slightly wounding him. A third grazed Mrs. Clark's mother, Mrs. Hettie Gorsline, 58, who ran from the house to investigate.

After the shooting, police said, Gesch appeared at the home of a former employe, W. D. Willis, and said: "I'll be dead within 20 minutes." Willis said the contractor handed him a copy of his will and ran.

Aviation Radio Interference Faults Stressed

Chicago, June 8 (AP).—Wawne Coy, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, said tonight that some TV and FM sets may set up "deadly" interference with aviation radio.

A set which has not had the proper safeguards built in, Coy said, "may be radiating interference which is causing havoc far and wide. It may be spoiling television reception for many blocks away. . . .

"It may be acting as a deadly weapon, interfering with aviation radio and endangering the lives of pasengers on airliners."

"This problem," Coy added, "is grave enough today when we have only 104 television stations on the air and more than 6,000,000 receivers. . . ."

As the number of stations and sets increase, the trouble could be "extremely magnified," Coy said.

He said three possible solutions have been advanced: Relocated chanels, change of intermediate frequencies of receivers, limit of amount of receiver radiation.

A "lenient" proposal by the Radio Manufacturers Association to limit receiver radiation "has not been met in practice," Coy said in addressing the RMA's 26th anual convention. He said cost is a factor.

But, he went on, "the results of our failure to take the necessary corrective action will be so far-reaching that we canot allow the relatively insignificant increase in receiver cost to stand in the way."

Rep. Bolton Files For Maryland Race

Annapolis, Md., June 9 (AP).—Representative William P. Bolton, Democrat, today became the first of Maryland's Congressional delegation to file for reelection.

Bolton filed for the Democratic nomination from the Second District which embraces Carroll, Baltimore and Hartford Counties and part of Baltimore.

A. Gordon Boone of Baltimore, Democrat, is the only other candidate to file for Congress from the same district.

Bolton gave his address as Inverness, Dundalk.

Real Estate Man's License Is Revoked

The District Real Estate Commission yesterday revoked the broker's license of Oscar H. Osterman failure "to remit or account for " $500 allegedly received for sale of a property.

The commission's found that Osterman, trading as O. H. Osterman and Co., 1010 Vermont ave. nw., had been asked to sell property at 715 Atlantic st. se., belonging to Margaret L. Blok.

Osterman, the commission said, accepted $500 from a Mrs. Elizabeth M. Steel as deposit for purchase o fthe property, but neither presented the contract to the owner nor returned the money to Mrs. Steele.

The commission found his action violated the Real Estate Brokers' License Law. The law provides that a broker whose license is revoked may not obtain another within a year.

Accidental Fall Kills Serviceman

Alvey suffered a dizzy spell while working as a service analysit at the Trew Motor Co., 1526 14th st. nw. at 10 a. m. He fell, striking his head and suffered a fractured skull. He died at 3:30 p. m. at Emergency Hospital.

Police said Alvey recently returned to work after being sick with pneumonia.

Greco, Egypt 700 B. C. Amity Revealed

Cairo, Egypt, June 9 (AP).—Bodies of Greeks and Egyptians buried side by side in a centuries-old cemetery proves that Greco-Egyptian friendship dates back to at least 700 B. C., archaeologists reported today.

The cemetery of Komfirin was found some 20 miles from Damanhur and south of the spot where the Rosetta stone was discovered.

Hieroglyphic inscriptions showed that a Greek community existed in this land of the Pharaohs in close friendship well before Alexander the Great brought Egypt under domination in 332 B. C.

Two hundred bodies have been found so far in the sand along the fringes of the desert area which was the scene of grim fighting against the Germans in the last war.

Some were in coffins of stone or wood and a few in coffins of earthenware with human-like heads. There were bronze mirrors and ornaments depicting the heads of gargoyles and griffins, neither of Egyptian origin. Graves contained black pottery with yellow engravings believed imported from ancient Hellas.

Also discovered was an ancient temple believed to date back to Rameses II who died in 1225 B. C. Found near it were goodluck charms made of gold and semi-precious stones, rings earrings and engraved amulets.

Silent Screen Crush Gets Him in Trouble

A young admirer of old-time movie queens yesterday pleaded guilty in Municipal Court to tearing out pictures of silent-screen sirens from three Library of Congress magazines on June 8.

He is Harry L. Liewald, 20, 1701 D st. ne., who told police he wanted the pictures for his scrapbook.

Judge Armond W. Scott postponed sentence for 30 days and referred the case to the probation office.

Prosecutor Fred Smithson said Liewald was seen tearing pictures from 20-year-old movie magazines, including one of Corinne Griffith, "silent" star and now wife of Redskin owner George Marshall.

Pittsburgh Faces Milkless Weekend After Dairy Strike

Pittsburgh, June 9 (U.P.). — A strike of 3000 AFL milkman cut off regular milk supplies to seven million residents of western Pennsylvania today.

Representatives of the Greater Pittsburgh Milk Dealers Association "reluctantly" recessed negotiations until Monday with the AFL Milk and Ice Cream Salesmen and Dairy Empolyes after a three-hour conference.

A spokesman for the association said the parties were within "spitting distance" of a settlement, "but it looks like a milkless weekend for all of us."

Milk, meanwhile, was selling at premium prices on the farm.

In Pittsburgh, hospital supplies were running dangerously low despite promises of emergency deliveries. An official of Children's Hospital said only 56 gallons were obtained today—about two thirds of the hospital's daily requirement.

Boy, 16, Saves Pal From River

The Washington Post
Jesse E. Bell (left) was rescued by Jerry Harding

A 16-year-old boy saved his pal from drowning yesterday, after the friend suffered a leg cramp when he fell into the Anacostia River.

Hero of the rescue was Jimmy Harding of 741 13th st. se., who jumped into the river and pulled out Jesse E. Bell, 17, of 768 13th st. se.

The two boys were sunbathing on a float near the John Philip Sousa Bridge when Jesse went overboard. He started to swim to shore, but was seized with the cramp and went under in the eight feet of water there.

The boys said Jesse had struggled to the surface for the fourth time before Jimmy was able to grab him by the hair and pull him to shore.

In the meantime, a passerby called police. By the time they arrived, however, Jesse had recovered and was able to walk back home with the help of his friend, they said.

Unified Fund-Raising

The reluctance of several national fund-raising organizations to join in a single united community drive for funds came sharply to the fore in the second citizens' meeting on this problem on Thursday. The givers, the solicitors of funds, the civic organizations, business establishments, and employe groups are all but unanimous in their demand for a single drive. Nearly all of the local and some of the national fund-raising organizations join heartily in this view. But a number of national organizations, such as the American Red Cross and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, feel that they must follow fund-raising patterns already well established. Indeed, most of these national organizations forbid their local chapters to participate in united community fund-raising efforts.

We can readily appreciate the preference of these organizations for campaigns under their own control. The American Cancer Society, for example, makes the point that its drive has great educational value aside from the actual raising of funds for research and public enlightenment. No doubt the Red Cross has good reason to believe that, with its enormous number of local chapters and individual workers, it can secure more money by acting independently. But it is not likely that the citizens who give and who carry on the campaigns are going to be swayed by these organizational viewpoints. They will necessarily favor what is best for the community as a whole, and the result may well be to compel the cooperation of the national organizations in a single drive, as Detroit has already done. For the wear and tear of many drives each year is more than employer and employe groups and civic organizations will tolerate over a long period.

It is not to be supposed that any of these worthy national organizations will be, or could be, denied the right to solicit funds in the Washington area. But they may well find it impossible to carry on the types of campaign they have waged in the past. In Detroit the employers and unions that are cooperating with the United Foundation guarantee to workers that they will be asked to contribute to only one organized drive during the year. The national organizations must arrange to share in that one effort or forgo all hope of organized solicitation within the 631 companies that have given the one-campaign pledge. With the overwhelming sentiment that has been built up behind the one-campaign idea here, it should be possible to work out a similar arrangement. Especially hopeful is the decision of the second citizens' meeting to explore the possibility of approaching the reluctant national organizations through the national association of community chests.

No More Cold War

Secretary Acheson has suggested that we cease to call our little game of Indian wrestling with the Soviet Union by the name of "cold war." In some curious way the Russians have managed to turn it against us. The term appears to have been first applied to the mounting state of tension resulting from the aggressive conduct of the Soviets toward the Western powers by Mr. Bernard M. Baruch in 1947. It was given wide currency and popularity by Mr. Walter Lippmann. Because the phrase was brief and pungent it was promptly adopted by journalists and thereafter applied to all the moves and countermoves in the contest. The Russian propagandists, however, have also adopted it, but as a kind of alternative term for "American warmongering" in contrast to the professed Soviet policy of benevolence and peace. To anyone acquainted with recent diplomatic history, this seems as silly as it is impudent; nevertheless it has been enormously effective. There are still in Europe, and perhaps even here, a good many innocent persons who take note of how often the ugly word "war" is upon our lips and how often the pretty word "peace" on the lips of the followers of the Kremlin.

Actually, as the London Economist observes, the choice open to Europeans is not between war and peace but rather between two very different kinds of peace. The first is the sort of peace now existing in Poland, Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania, Czechoslovakia and eastern Germany. Any country in Europe or anywhere else in the world may have peace with Russia on these terms. The other is the kind of peace under which such terms can be safely refused—which is to say, a peace based on economic and military strength. However, from one point of view "cold war" is a very good phrase. It is a vivid, easily remembered phrase for a phenomenon unknown until our times. So from another point of view was "unconditional surrender" a good phrase—but the trouble with such phrases is that those who manufacture them can rarely foresee all the contexts in which they will be applied.

Right To Strike

Testifying before a Senate Labor Subcommittee as spokesman for the heads of 21 unions, George Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, declared that Senator Donnell's bill to outlaw strikes on railways and substitute compulsory arbitration of disputes was a step toward totalitarianism. The proposed legislation would, he said, "inevitably lead to the nationalization or Government control of the railroads." Mr. Harrison maintains that railway employes have the "absolute right" to strike so long as the roads are under private management. His solution for disputes that lead to strikes is what he calls "good faith" seizure of the roads by the Government, with employes working for the Government at wages set by the Government while it is in control.

Peter F. Drucker, author of The New Society, agrees with Mr. Harrison that the Government should not ban strikes that would endanger the national welfare unless it is prepared to take temporary control of the struck enterprise. However, Mr. Drucker concedes that society will "have to find some way to reconcile the union's need for the strike with society's demand that no private group have the right to threaten the national welfare by concerted action." Although Mr. Drucker offers many helpful suggestions as to the basis of a rational wage policy that would balance the interests of the private enterprise, the workers, the union and society, he admits that the strike has been increasingly employed in recent years as a coercive weapon in disputes over minor issues. A real solution of the strike problem, he concludes, would "maintain the union's right to strike but would make sure that it is never used in a manner endangering society."

That seems to us a Utopian formula inapplicable to existing conditions. If railway unions, for example, continue to call strikes to enforce demands for changes in working rules, wage increases and other concessions—issues that ultimately have to be settled at the conference table—partial or complete transportation tieups will recur at frequent intervals, and the American people will before long become convinced that either compulsory arbitration of disputes or nationalization of the railways is the only feasible method of insuring uninterrupted service or at least minimizing the danger of rail strikes that paralyze trade and industry over wide areas.

Cornerstone Of Law

It would be a wanton tragedy if the genocide convention, approved after careful study by the McMahon Foreign Relations Subcommittee, were left to die on the vine because of the press of other business in the Senate. The Foreign Relations Committee as a whole has held one hearing on it—but without a quorum present. This suggests neither indifference nor neglect, since the committee has been carrying an enormous legislative burden. We urge it to act upon the convention without more delay, however, so that ratification by the Senate can come before the end of the Eighty-first Congress.

Genocide—the deliberate destruction of an ethnic group—has been declared an international crime by the General Assembly of the United Nations. The convention implementing this declaration has already been ratified by 15 nations and needs the concurrence of only five more to be put into effect. American ratification has been urged by an impressive variety of religious, civic and labor organizations representing a total membership of nearly a hundred million. The only significant dissent has come from a group within the American Bar Association and is based, in our judgment, on meaninglessly legalistic grounds.

However, to meet the objections of this group—that the United States might be haled before an international court on account of discrimination in this country against the Negro race—the McMahon subcommittee offered four clarifying and interpretive "understandings." These must set at rest every rational fear that the Russians might succeed in using the convention against the United States for propaganda purposes. Only failure to ratify on the part of this country can have an adverse propaganda effect.

The truth is that the convention is a woefully weak one considering the enormity of the crime with which it deals. It leaves punishment largely to the country in which the crime may be committed. It remains nevertheless, we think, an instrument of vital importance as a cornerstone of international law. It is significant as a beginning. And it deserves the support of the United States as a foundation of the moral structure which is the only alternative to world anarchy.

Weapons And Politics

There are some who believe that the political history of Western mankind can be interpreted in terms of military tactics, i. e., of the diastolic and systolic rhythm of attack and defense. If fortifications made possible the rise of the ancient city-states, the irresistible infantry phalanx made possible the rise of a world state, as exemplified in the Roman Empire. Wherever defense has been preponderant, as it was, for example, in the earlier Middle Ages, the political tendency is toward separatism and local sovereignties. The feudal system and the power of the medieval guilds depended upon the ability of masonry to withstand siege. Thus the rise of monarchical absolutism and of national states follows the development of artillery capable of reducing the walls of baronial castles and fortified towns.

Similarly, the development of the arquebus and musket, no less effective in the hand of the peasant or the apprentice than of the knight, undermined the ancient chivalric order of society and prepared the way for egalitarian theories of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries which underlie the philosophy of the Second Amendment to the Constitution. But in the same way the decline of democracy and the rise of the totalitarian concept of the state can be attributed to the technological revolution. The military sanctions of democracy were destroyed when war, like most other phases of life, became mechanized. Weapons were standardized and their parts made interchangeable. The emphasis in warmaking was shifted to factors of production and supply. The workmen in the factory became as important as the soldier in the field. The responsible direction of war passed from the hands of field commanders to a bureaucratic organization called the General Staff. Warfare, in short, became a big business with monopolistic tendencies. But, unlike other industrial monopolies, it created no problems of unemployment, since the rate of destruction kept pace with or exceeded that of production. Thus bit by bit war and preparation for war have become the main concerns of the modern state.

The fact, then—if it is a fact—that armor (which is to say defensive equipment) has now regained the advantage over firepower (or the resources of attack) does not necessarily mean an end to the danger of tyranny, though it may mean for the time being an end to the danger of external aggression. For, from the point of view of human freedom, what matters is not so much whether weapons are offensive or defensive; it is rather a question of who controls the weapons.

Under The Bed

We have it on the authority of the Attorney General that every Communist in the United States is known to the FBI. Mr. McGrath said so a week ago at a dinner of the Fifth National Conference on Citizenship and added that "we know of none in the employ of the Government today."

This could be considered immensely reassuring were it not for the fact that the same issue of The Washington Post in which the Attorney General's statement was reported carried a story that Louis F. Budenz said he could name 400 "concealed Reds" now operating in the United States. "I know," he declared, "that the influence of Communists in various key departments in Washington has been great, and was particularly effective in causing the United States to 'pull its punches' in regard to Poland and China."

Whether Mr. Budenz has confided the identity of his 400 "concealed Reds" to Mr. Hoover, or whether he still knows more than the FBI, remains obscure. Mr. Budenz, you must remember, is the close-mouthed former Communist who neglected for several years to mention to the FBI that he had heard a couple of other former Communists refer to Dr. Owen Lattimore as a kind of former fellow traveler or former crypto-Communist, to use a technical term now very much in vogue. Mr. Budenz simply hadn't thought it worth talking about until the Tydings Subcommittee provided him with a libelproof forum for the purpose.

Mr. Budenz intends to be pretty close-mouthed about his 400 "concealed Reds," too, unless some congressional investigating group throws the cloak of its immunity around his shoulders. The libel laws, he says candidly, prevent him from "calling this roll." Mr. Budenz has an interesting theory, which he outlined for the benefit of the Tydings Subcommittee, that "concealed Reds" are under orders from Moscow to use libel suits as a means of "bleeding white" the patriots who expose them. It's possible, however, that a judge and jury might look at the theory somewhat skeptically.

At any rate, Attorney General McGrath seems downright suspicious. "There are," he told the Conference on Citizenship, "those who, though cloaked in the guise of respectability and patriotism, have through inflammatory speech and malicious publication created disunity even amongst our own people. Paid patriots are flourishing as purveyors of hate."

Europe's Progress

If capital investment, now high, is maintained, and if the balance of payments problem solved—admittedly very optimistic assumptions—Europe's industrial production can be increased by about 50 percent during the next decade, and agricultural output raised by from 20 to 30 percent in northern, western and southern Europe, and as much as 40 to 50 percent in eastern Europe. These estimates are given in the new report for 1949 of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe. They are based on a careful analysis of population and production trends and the structure of the labor market.

This development, however, presupposes access to essential supplies of imported raw materials and equipment. If withdrawal of dollar aid were to result in a sudden drastic curtailment of essential imports, progress along the lines indicated would be retarded. Consequently, the ECE repeatedly urges the countries of western Europe to intensify their efforts to make adjustments in production and trade well in advance of the end of the dollar-aid program, with a view to reducing their dependence on overseas imports and eliminating deficits in their overseas balance of payments.

"Dualism In China"

In your June 7 editorial "Dualism in China," you seem to favor the occupying of Formosa by American troops on the basis that, pending a peace treaty, the island is legally Japanese territory. This is a course demanded by our security in the Pacific. What it has to do with admitting Communist China to the United Nations, however, is not clear.

While Chinese local authorities, in temporary rift with the recognized government, have sometimes been dealt with by our local representatives in their areas, we have stoutly proclaimed it as our policy since 1900 that all should respect China's "territorial integrity" under the Hay Doctrine. In 1946 we departed from this policy for the first time when General Marshall urged Chiang Kai-shek to take an armed party—the Communists, who were practically the agents of Soviet Russia—into the government, and upon his failure to comply, openly denounced the Hay Doctrine and "territorial integrity" by withdrawing all support from the recognized government, allowing it to be overwhelmed by the Soviet-supported Communists.

You now advocate our seating of the Communists in the United Nations, giving Soviet Russia a powerful ally on the Security Council to further thwart the operations of that body. If that constitutes "dualism in China" I think there need be a great deal of trepidation about it.

As for Chiang Kai-shek, you appear greatly to exaggerate his influence on our policy vis-a-vis Russia. You will remember that the Truman policy is to "contain totalitarianism" wherever it raises its ugly head. With the United States in possession of Formosa, under trusteeship for Japan, Chiang Kai-shek's 500,000 troops could form the nucleus of the long-sought United Nations police force designed to maintain peace by carrying out the dictates of the Security Council against aggression.

Then the only way Chiang could "declare war on Russia" and "drag us in" would be on order from the Security Council to combat aggression. Presumably any "banging away at the mainland of China" he then did would be on direct orders from Trygve Lie. REALIST.
Washington.

You are to be congratulated on your realistic and sound approach to the China and Formosa situations. We see eye to eye on the matter of a SCAP (USA) "trusteeship" for Formosa pending signing of a peace treaty with Japan, as the only peace-promoting solution to this threatening issue.

Your are perfectly correct in stating that it would be "quite in keeping with the realities in China" to effectuate such a trusteeship for Formosa, while at the same time approving admission of Red China to the "international debating society" (quotes mine), viz, the United Nations. After all, Communist domination on the Chinese mainland is a fait accompli, and we gain nothing by hiding our diplomatic heads in the sand on this issue.

Western Market

West End residents are appalled at the suggestion of destroying the present Western Market building at 21st and K sts. nw., which is one of the pleasing old landmarks of Washington, and erecting on its site a multi-stored commercial garage.

The alleged justification for this short-sighted plan to allow "a group of private investors to take over publicly-owned property is that the garage would offer additional and needed "parking space." True, but at what a price! This section is still predominantly residential and the entire area would be degraded and cheapened by this monstrous eyesore. Also to be considered is the hardship to the merchants and farmers who sell their produce in the market. What becomes of their businesses during the two years required for building?

Prince Georges Slight

Being a good American, I am enraged over the fact that Memorial Day, a day set aside to honor our war dead, was observed, to my knowledge, all over the country with the exception of Prince Georges County, Md. The schools were open in this county. Why?

DOROTHY KRUH,
Greenbelt, Md.

Editor's Note: Memorial, or Decoration, Day is a legal holiday in 43 States, including Maryland. However, Maryland law does not require that Memorial Day be a school holiday, but instead provides that a part of the school day may be devoted to memorial exercises. As a practical fact, the school year is based on 180 days, and if a school holiday is granted on Memorial Day it usually is necessary to make up the time at the end of the session.

More Parking Space

Difficulties in finding places in which to park cars in Washington are becoming more and more serious. They affect most grievously persons residing in the suburban areas.

In another year the situation will be still more serious. The numbers of buses may be increased, but that will furnish only a partial solution, since the majority of suburban residents find it preferable, for one reason or another, to use their automobiles—especially when they have to make purchases in town.

It has been suggested that the only solution of this problem may be found in underground parking lots, but the construction and operation of such lots would obviously involve enormous expense and untold difficulties. I believe that a very considerable relief in the parking difficulty could be found in the simple expedient of narrowing the unnecessarily wide sidewalks on certain downtown streets and the removing of trees, many of which are not only in the way but are scraggly and not at all beautiful.

The streets which I have especially in mind are 15th st. between K and Pennsylvania ave., K st. from 9th west, New York ave., between 9th and 13th, and 13th between G and K.

If the above measure should be adopted, room would be made for the diagonal parking of several thousand additional cars downtown.

"Strength Through Rational Hope"

Walter Lippmann, in his June 6 column, "Strength Through Rational Hope," effectively elaborates one of the gravest shortcomings of the present United States leadership which, as he says, alternately prods and pats without simultaneously inspiring free peoples with "the necessary element of rational hope."

Mr. Lippmann's conclusion, however, is disappointing. The great hope needed to inspire the free peoples, in his opinion, is "that the Red army should retire from Europe, opening up to all Germany, to all of Eastern Europe, the chance of national independence.

"What are the inducements and what are the compulsions which could bring this about is the central problem of our times?" he adds. "But though we cannot now see clearly and in detail just how to achieve this object, we must proclaim it as the rational hope which inspires and which justifies our whole European policy."

That approach leaves this reader cold, and "uninspired." I submit that a positive, bold approach to the problem will inspire and unify this divided country and the people of the North Atlantic. And that approach is for our capable but overcautious Secretary of State to cease mincing words like "community," "integration," "unity" and "common interest" and state that:

1. The objective of United States foreign policy is a federal union of free peoples, a federal union similar to our own, with a common foreign policy and defense force, common citizenship and currency and postal and communications system, and a customs-free economy;

2. Such a union would be formed within the framework of the United Nations;

3. Delegates from the North Atlantic Pact sponsors are invited to meet now to explore the possibilities of forming such a free, federal union.

Secretary Acheson's Canadian counterpart, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs L. B. Pearson, effectively combined Mr. Lippmann's "prods", "pats", and "rational hopes" when he said recently:

"If we are to win the battles against the reactionary forces of Soviet communism, we will need more vision and wisdom than the democratic countries sometimes show in their economic and financial relations with each other. Each of us may have to forego some immediate advantages for the long-term general good. To put it in concrete and Canadian terms, we here may at times have to forego winter vacations in California. We may also have to watch imports from the U. K., encouraged by our government, compete successfully with our own domestic products.

"In working out these problems successfully, in attempting to reconcile these differing interests, we can, I think, use our North Atlantic Pact—our North Atlantic Alliance. It may provide the foundation for a great cooperative economic commonwealth of the Western world—which one day may become a political commonwealth. You may say that this is unrealistic nonsense, but I suggest that in this jet-propelled, atomic age, no plan less than this will be adequate; no vision less than this will do."

A vehicle by which federal union can be explored, the bipartisan Atlantic Union resolution, still gathers dust in the halls of Congress, awaiting action by men too timid to follow the lead of the American people. Only last month, in a Gallup Poll, a majority of those with an opinion thought it would be a good or fair idea for the U. S. to join with "England, Canada, France and a few other Western European nations" in "a federal union—that is, something like the way 48 States in this country are joined together."

And, in my opinion the Atlantic Union Resolution would meet Mr. Lippmann's requirement of "something more definite, more tangible and visible." At the same time it would constitute a great "condition of fact" which would prove our worthiness as the leader of the free world.

Right To Join Encroachment

By Malvina Lindsay

Your Fez Or Mine?

EVERYWHERE you turn you are reminded that this is a Nation of joiners. Men with fezes and badges from all parts of the country fill downtown hotels. Two weeks ago thousands of others in different kinds of fezes were on every street corner.

No one questions—as yet—the right of anybody to join a lodge and wear a fez. But . . . could the time come when anybody with a convention badge let alone a fez or corsage, might be regarded with chilly suspicion?

You think of the growing encroachment on the long cherished right to join. Oh, yes, of course, unconstitutional and subversive groups have to be deterred. But here is this sinister, creeping attack on groups whose only offense is that some other set of joiners, or some individual with a megaphone, doesn't agree with their tenets.

Just now this scare campaign is chiefly against what is often called the "good societies," the groups with idealistic goals. But how far could it be carried out?

And, might it not blight one of the finest heritages of the American spirit, the zeal to do something about injustice, to make things better tomorrow than they are today? You think particularly of what American women have contributed by their organizations — in improving sanitation, health, recreation, education, justice in this country. You remember Margaret Culkin Banning, busy writer and active Republican that she is, recently telling an audience "I belong to 37 organizations and am proud of it."

YOU THINK of the protest made to President Truman by the head of one set of joiners, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, over the activity in United World Federalists, Inc., of Thomas K. Finletter, recently appointed Air Force Secretary. Here is an organization committed to an ideal of world government—an ideal to which public officials of this country and other Western nations, as well as many members of Congress, repeatedly pay lip homage, an ideal toward which the establishment of the United Nations was hopefully regarded by its founders as the first step.

You think of other organizations, those working for closer union of nations, for civil justice, extension of human freedom, for even nothing more than the denunciation of sin, and of the attempts to label them or their members as someway less "American" than their detractors.

You think of the psychological studies of the authoritarian man, in Germany and elsewhere, how they reveal his passion to label all persons neatly by adjective or group concept. To him a man is a Mason, a Moose or a Methodist—never a man.

How much, you wonder, will the American people stand of this busybody poking into their joining and associations? Maybe not so much as you fear. You think of President Truman's blunt Americanese in his reply concerning Secretary Finletter: "All this howl about organizations a fellow belongs to gives me a pain in the neck." You wonder if perhaps the President, close as he is in feeling to the average man, may not have been expressing a growing irritation among Americans.

THEN THERE is Miss Dorothy Kenyon, first victim of McCarthyism, who declares in the current issue of the Journal of the American Association of University Women that she will not stop belonging to things because of her "grotesque" experience. "Will I seek conformity and the dead level of mediocrity as the only safe course? she asks. Her answer is: "As far as I am concerned there is not much danger."

"I have joined many organizations," she says. "Why shouldn't I? I have lived a long life. I have great energy, curiosity, enormous interest in ideas and in people, above all great faith in the power of ideas. Most of the organizations I have joined at one time or another are well known and highly reputable. But even the few that turned out to be not so good all started out as bright ideas which struck my fancy, and I stayed in each of them only a short time, getting out in each case because I didn't like what was going on."

You think of how greatly the good has outweighed the bad in all this American joining, in concrete results of self development and humanitarianism, in the Nation-wide ties of friendship that have been forged in giving many groups a voice and a sense of participation in public affairs they would not have had otherwise.

Yes, there may have been a time when sophisticates laughed at Babbitts and joiners. But now even a man in a fez is the symbol of a basic American liberty.

Psychology In Defense

I heard on the Frankfort radio a gist of your article about the American bill on military help to western Europe. You have laid stress on psychological preparation for military defense, as the first condition is to have the will to use these arms for defense.

You are right. Already Sheridan wrote: The sword without theory is only a piece of iron. We Czechoslovaks had an opposite experience: Theory without the sword is only a piece of paper.

Official Secrecy

By Marquis Childs

Is It Harming Real Security?

Childs

IN INSTANCE after instance this Administration is keeping back information on the apparent assumption that the American people can't be told facts of present-day life. A kind of creeping fog of secrecy is shutting off more and more areas from public understanding and public discussion.

A great many people seem to have been puzzled by President Truman's press conference remark that we were nearer peace in the world than at any time during the past five years. On the same day the President sent an official message to Congress on the European rearmament program that was full of foreboding and hints of danger.

When the inquiring reporter asks at the White House why the President believes peace is near today, he is met with a cryptic smile. Isn't it possible, he is told, that the President has information that is not available to reporters?

This is fairly typical, it seems to me, of the attitude prevailing today. Papa knows best, and you must take Papa's word for it. The other phase of this attitude is the promulgation of propaganda about new and secret weapons which will alter the nature of a future war in a magical way so as to eliminate the grimness of mass armies, mud, blood and death. This last has some resemblance to the beautiful theories of the more wild-eyed advocates of victory through super air power.

IN THIS atmosphere it is good to have David E. Lilienthal, former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, speak out frankly on secrecy in the AEC. In an article in Collier's he says that the Government monopoly maintained by the commission, along with the shroud of secrecy, has prevented private industry from pushing the kind of competitive development that will mean real progress.

Lilienthal's numerous enemies on Capitol Hill may be slightly surprised to find him plumping for competition and an end of Government monopoly. But anyone who has taken the trouble to examine his views will find that basically this is in keeping with what he has always stood for. On the question of secrecy Lilienthal is unequivocal:

"The act's process of declassifying (making non-secret) information having industrial value has proved hopelessly academic and unworkable. It resembles nothing so much as trying to cut down the redwood of secrecy with a penknife; the tree grows faster than the whittler can cut."

The fact that Government monopoly would choke industrial development was clear to him, Lilienthal writes, when he first became commission chairman. Consequently he made every effort to bring in leading corporations. But the obstacles in the act were too great and Lilienthal became convinced that "atomic knowledge in the hands of Government will be intensively and successfully developed only for military purposes."

THE LILIENTHAL article fits in with a speech made two weeks ago by former commission member Robert F. Bacher, now head of research in physics at the California Institute of Technology. Bacher warned that the complete secrecy surrounding the decision to proceed with the hydrogen bomb has obscured an issue that the American people should understand and debate. The amount of fissionable material is limited and therefore whether one hydrogen bomb, which would take vast quantities of this material, is more valuable than 25 ordinary atomic bombs becomes a vital question.

"The worst part of our present position," Bacher said, "is that the citizen is not told what we are doing at the present time. If a little frank and open discussion, which might be very illuminating to our citizens, would give any useful information to the Russians that they do not already possess, it would be most surprising. The public does not need to know technical questions about how fissionable material is produced and how atomic bombs are made. It would be most helpful to them, however, in judging whether this hydrogen bomb development can be expected to add much to our military effectiveness, to know approximately how many atom bombs we have . . ."

President Truman on January 31 made his terse statement announcing that he had ordered work to proceed on the "so-called hydrogen or super-bomb." Nothing has been said officially since that time. The rest, as Hamlet put it, is silence.

The marching units competed yesterday on the South Ellipse, which was turned into a riot of color with the brilliant Zouave-fashion uniforms of the Prophets, flashing swords and smartly carried rifles.

"During the last 25 years, not a month has passed but what I have visited in the United States either on pleasure or business," Espie said.

Retired now from his commercial-printing business in Toronto, where he was born, Espie is still president of the Buscombe and Dodge Paper Stock Co. there.

He is a Shriner, past director of the Royal Order of Jesters of Canada and the United States and a Royal Arch Mason. He has been a member of the Prophets group since 1922.

Wheat Crop Way Below '49, U. S. Reports

The report forecast yields of 19½ bushels an acre in Maryland compared with 19 last year; 18½ bushels in Virginia, and 19½ an acre in West Virginia, the same as last year.

Other grains were reported, compared with last year, as follows:

Rye, 22 million bushels; last year 19 million; average 32 million.

Oats, 1380 million; last year 1322 million; average 1274. The per acre yield is down to 79 bushels compared with 87 in 1949.

Barley, 278 million bushels; last year 238; average 310 million. Per acre yield is 78 compared with 84 bushels last year. The yield per acre in Maryland went up from 14 last year to 14½ this year; in Virginia it was the same as a year ago, or 15 bushels; West Virginia dropped from 13 bushels last year to 12½.

Corn Crops Favorable

"June 1 prospects," the report said, "for the 1950 corn crop were generally favorable." Although planting was delayed by weather, conditions now are about normal.

"In the Southeast," it reported, "corn is in fairly good condition although the crop is somewhat later than usual. Cool, wet weather during May interrupted late planting and retarded germination and growth, particularly in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. In Virginia, some fields were badly flooded by heavy local rains."

Nationally the apple crop will be "larger than usual, but smaller than last year." This doesn't prevail near Washington, however.

"In Maryland," the report said, "the set was generally heavy on all varieties, but the drop was also heavy. However, fruit remaining after the drop seems to be well distributed over the trees, which will reduce thinning costs and may result in better size and quality of fruits.

"Virginia apples bloomed unusually heavy except for Red Delicious, which has a relatively poor outlook. Yellow varieties generally are better than the reds. Staymans have good prospects, but Winesaps and Yorks are not so good. The set of Yorks in Frederick County has been disappointing. Hail caused considerable damage to Virginia apples in widely scattered areas.

"West Virginia trees have a satisfactory set in most areas. Most varieties have good prospects except Delicious, which has a relatively light set following the heavy crop last year."

Total peach crop is only three-fourths of last year, four-fifths of average, and about 56 million bushels. It is short everywhere except in California.

Virginia Crop Halved

"The Virginia crop is only half as large as last year," the forecast said, "with Elbertas reported damaged most by spring frosts. Also there has been considerable hail damage. The season is from 10 days to two weeks later than last year."

Potatoes in Virginia are "excellent in all commercial areas and the farm crop is up or coming up to an even stand. Only light movement from Virginia is expected before the week of June 12 (next week.)

On the Eastern shore of Maryland and around Dover, Del., where the commercial deal, developed in recent years, has been expanded this year, stands are regular and potatoes are making good growth.

Nationally, the potato crop in the early and intermediate States is about 83 percent of normal. That is 3 percent below last year's record condition at this time.

Virginia was one of six States where milk production set a record for May. Production in that State reached 196 million pounds, one million above last year.

Five percent more eggs were laid in May than in May a year ago. In the South Central States, including Virginia and Maryland, production was up only 1 percent.

Oranges are estimated at 107 million boxes, compared with 104 last year; grapefruit at 36 million against 46 last year; lemons at 10 million, about 250,000 boxes greater than a year ago.

Millionaire Named as Director In Bankrupt Firm RFC Aided

Senators checking into a $400,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan to a Florida firm which later went bankrupt heard yesterday that one of the company's directors is worth five million dollars or more.

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.), chairman of a Senate Banking subcommittee, commented that if the director was that well-to-do, he could have afforded to take the risk of financing the company "a lot better than most of us taxpayers."

The director was identified as Wiley L. Moore, sr.

RFC examiner Charles B. Lewis said Moore owns the transportation system at Jacksonville, Fla., and the Georgia Life Insurance Co. at Atlanta, is a director of the Fulton National Bank of Atlanta and has oil interests in Oklahoma and Texas.

Worth Five Millions

"I imagne he is worth at least five million dollars," Lewis told the Senators. He added that he had known Moore for 40 years and that the financier helped convince him of the worth of the product the company proposed to manufacture—a device that would permit a typewriter to make up to five copies without the use of carbon paper.

Under questioning by Fulbright, Lewis denied that his friendship for Moore influenced him to recommend the RFC loan to the Ribbonwriter Corp. of America, at Dania, Fla.

"But I had more confidence in it after talking to Mr. Moore, I'll say that," Lewis added. He said he just put all the facts together and reached his own conclusion.

Fulbright said that the manager of the RFC office at Jacksonville had recommended against the loan, and so had various FRC advisory committees.

He told Lewis:

"The fact is that nobody was for this loan but you, and the RFC Board relied on your advice."

Although the RFC Board approved a $400,000 loan to Ribbonwriter, only $300,000 of it had been advanced by May 16, 1949. The firm went bankrupt July 29 the same year.

Lewis reepatedly expressed his belief to the committee that the Government will not take a loss on the loan, and called the gadget "one of the most important inventions brought out." He said he is confident the collateral will repay the loan if efforts to reorganize the company fail and the RFC takes over.

Role of Sheriff

The committee questioned Lewis about Sheriff Walter T. Clark of Broward County, Fla., one of the company's vice presidents, but the RFC man did not know much about him.

Fulbright yesterday placed in the record an RFC recommendation citing reports that Clark had been mentioned as "a very close personal friend of the President." The memo, dated August 26, 1949, was from Fred H. Farwell, manager of RFC's Jacksonville office, to RFC General Counsel James L. Dougherty.

In Fort Lauderdale, Clark denied emphatically that the President knew anything about the loan.

"Oh, no, no, no," Clark said. "I wouldn't try to do anything like that, if we could not get it on its merits.

"I have never discussed the loan with Mr. Truman. I doubt if he knows anything about it."

Clark said he went to Washington with Siegfried Bechhold, Ribbonwriter Corp. president, "on that $400,000 loan" but they didn't see the President.

"We just went to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. office," he said. "I don't remember whether any others went with us."

He said he and Bechhold did not visit with political figures while in Washington and that no political pressure was exerted to get the loan.

Job Given Up By Remington

peat her charges before the board.

He also received an out-of-court settlement estimated at $10,000 after she repeated her charges over a radio program. Miss Bentley said recently through her attorney, however, that she did not approve the settlement.

Then, only a few weeks ago, the House Committee on un-American Activities confronted the official with the sworn testimony of two former Communists that he had participated in Communist activities while employed in Knoxville, Tenn., as a messenger for the Tennesee Valley Authority. He was 19 years old at the time.

After denying the accusations, Remington was called before the New York grand jury and again professed his innocence. His indictment followed.

Remington said it has not been pleasant to remain with the department after the Bentley episode. But he said he thought he owed it both to the Government and himself to stay on, at least a while.

"Later, when I sought other employment," he added, "I learned quickly that the publicity I had received frustrated my efforts to work elsewhere. More recently, when further suspicion was cast on me, it was impossible for me to quit."

Lee made his challenge to Sawyer in a formal statement.

The Manchurian-born official, who is being investigated by Congress as a possible security risk, said Sawyer is in such a hurry to fire him that he is being denied a chance to defend his patriotism.

Lee also repeated his charge that Sawyer was acting under pressure from the Senate Commerce Committee when he handed down his "quit or be fired" ultimatum to Lee and Remington.

Meantime, a Senate Appropriations subcommittee made public testimony showing that Sawyer said seven weeks ago that while Lee had some "peculiarities personally," he had nothing to indicate he was disloyal.

He added that Lee had performed valuable work and at one time saved the Government millions of dollars by working out new techniques for Army occupation forces in Japan. But he conceded there have been complaints Lee did not get along with his colleagues too well.

Sawyer asked for the resignations of Lee and Remington in the interests of "good administration" and insisted the action was not a reflection on their loyalty.

Cain Again Blocks Rent Vote

buster against a Federal rent control extension bill, still had a long way to go to crack the Senate record of 18 hours and 23 minutes.

That mark was set by the late Senator Robert LaFollette, sr., of Wisconsin on May 29-30, 1908.

Cain took the floor at 11:58 a. m. (EDT) and at 6:44 p. m. broke the record he set on March 8, 1949, when he spoke for 6 hours and 45 minutes on opposition to President Truman's appointment of Mon C. Wallgren as chairman of the National Security Resources Board—an appointment later withdrawn.

Ellender Spoke 12 Hours

Six days later Senator Ellender (D., La.) spoke 12 hours and 19 minutes against a resolution to amend Senate rules to shut off filibusters—the longest speech in recent Senate history.

There was talk around the Senate cloakroom that Cain was bent on at least breaking Ellender's mark.

Although Cain took the floor at 11:58, he did not actually begin his speech until 12:30. The first 32 minutes were devoted to skirmishes with Senate Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.), in which other Senators participated, over Lucas' proposal to set a time next week for voting on the measure.

No agreement was reached and later efforts to work out a compromise also fell by the wayside.

About 2½ hours after he took the floor yesterday, Cain got a 15-minute breather. The Senate recessed for a quarter hour while Lucas and Republican Floor Leader Wherry tried to work out a voting agreement. Cain would have no part of it, and resumed talking again after the 15 minutes expired.

Not Tired After Four Hours

After holding the floor four hours, Cain cheerfully agreed to another brief recess for further dickering. Tired? "Relatively, no," the loquacious lawmaker answered.

It had taken nearly an hour to assemble a quorum for the second installment of Cain's marathon anti-rent control speech he started Wednesday. The Senate had taken time out Thursday to pass a couple of hundred minor bills, under an agreement that let Cain reclaim his speaking rights today.

Senator Lucas was sorely irked by Cain's time-killing tactics. At one point the majority leader exploded:

"We're going to vote on a rent control bill in the United States Senate if we have to stay here until Christmas!"

But Cain, who had turned down suggestions for a decisive roll call Tuesday, or Wednesday, or Thursday, or even June 19, showed no interest in the Christmas proposition either.

Cain contends the time has come to end this last major remnant of wartime controls. He said Federal rent controls deny landlords their rights. If any localities feel they need controls, he argued, they can be enacted locally.

Lucas, Senator Lehman (D.-Lib., N. Y.) and several other Senators argue there is still an urgent need for rent ceilings. They say that in many places where controls have been lifted, rents have skyrocketed. They forecast a demand for another round of pay boost demands if rents are permitted to zoom.

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.), who in the past had supported continuance of Federal rent controls, put himself on record through a long series of questions as opposed to a further extension.

He said supporters of the bill failed to produce evidence of a Nation-wide need for continued controls. He maintained that the need now is localized and Federal legislation is not justified.

Morse's questions gave Cain some relief from his speaking grind and he took advantage of it to eat some sandwiches and swallow some milk and coffee.

During the day, Senator Hoey (D., N. C.), usually rated a strong Administration man, announced his opposition to further extension of the Federal law. He said the war has been over five years and all other controls have been removed.

Cain, in his rambling discourse, read newspaper articles dealing with rent controls and a number of telegrams from persons indorsing his stand. He also had some sharp words for Housing Expediter Tighe Woods who administers the rent control law.

we must rush to completion an air defense system and put it on a "24-hour alert."

Admiral Forrest Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, testified that it is "essential" that funds for a new Navy shipbuilding program be provided next year to replace aging warships and that aircraft procurement funds be boosted.

"From the military point of view and the world situation today," said Sherman, "we feel that we should have more strength than we have now.

"The level of appropriations that has been recommended today constitutes the decision of the Commander-in-Chief, it constitutes the best compromise between our military requirements and the over-all requirements of the country, but as far as the Navy is concerned . . . the level now represents the minimum that I can conscientiously support."

Collins and Vandenberg declared themselves along the same line.

While these statements were made behind closed doors some weeks back and just made public, Defense officials say they stand today. The recent disclosures of important new atomic and more conventional weapons being under development still must be perfected, procured and paid for, they say, and at a high cost.

Meanwhile, the foreign military aid program went forward yesterday, with these two developments:

(1) The Defense Department announced that six Navy landing ships will be delivered to Indo-China under the arms assistance plan—the first military aid to go to that trouble?torn land. The craft, formerly known as LCIs (Landing craft-infantry) are being readied at Puget Sound, Wash., for delivery in about six weeks.

(2) Six American ambassadors joined in an appeal to Congress to vote the second year of military assistance proposed by the Administration.

Ambassador to Great Britain Lewis Douglas said in a statement forwarded to the Congressional committees considering the $1,222,500,000 arms aid bill:

"For the United States to falter now might be a fatal blow to the West."

Similar pleas came from Ambassador Henry F. Grady, Greece; George Wadsworth, Turkey; John C. Wiley, Iran; John J. Muccio, Korea and Myron M. Cowen, Philippines.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee received the statements and went on with questioning of State and Defense Department officials behind closed doors. They adjourned until Tuesday, when further testimony on details of the program will be resumed.

Delegates to the ninety-first Synod of the Augustana Lutheran Church yesterday reversed a decision of the previous day and voted to continue holding the Synod annually.

On Thursday delegates had voted, 167 to 165, to hold the Synod every two years, beginning in 1952.

At yesterday's session, however, Dr. C. O. Bengtson, president of the Illinois Conference, moved to reconsider the question "because the narrow margin of the vote will be no blessing to the church." A second balloting ended with 189 votes to 166 for the annual Synod.

Speakers included Dr. Paul C. Empie, executive director of the National Lutheran Council, and the Rev. Dr. Frederik A. Scholtz, executive secretary of the Commission on Younger Churches and Orphaned Missions of the National Lutheran Council.

Dr. Empie reported that in the past decade, American Lutherans have contributed more than 36 million dollars to relieve suffering in Europe and Asia. He appealed for continued support to meet this year's relief goal of $3,200,000.

Lr. Schiotz called for a "resurgence of Christianity to give creative direction to the restlessness of our time."

"Our first and primary certainty today is to know that a sick world elicits the compassion of Our Lord. Let this certainty grip us until we are controlled and possessed by it, and, if this be so, we don't need too much of detailed instruction," he declared.

During the afternoon, 16 young men, who will be ordained at a 4 p. m. service Sunday at Washington National Cathedral, signed the Articles of Faith before the Ministerium. The candidates for ordination are graduates of Augustana Theological Seminary, Rock Island, Ill.

During the Sunday morning service at Augustana Lutheran Church, six young women graduates of the Immanuel Deaconess Institute, Omaha, Nebr., will be consecrated as deaconesses.

World Police To Prevent War Urged

Frederick, Md., June 9 (AP).—Evangelical and Reformed churches in Maryland and nearby sections of neighboring States today went on record in favor of a world police force to stop wars.

The action was taken at a session of the Potomac Synod, which covers churches of the denomination in Maryland, eastern West Virginia, southern Pennsylvania, and northern Virginia.

The Rev. Timothy Lehman of Edinburgh, Va., was chairman of the committee that proposed the police force resolution. It said:

"Since history teaches that war produces bankruptcy and annihilation, we urge that through the United Nations the United States seek the creation of a world police force to stop aggression and devastating global wars."

More than a hundred delegates to the synod sessions at Hood College kept busily at a long schedule of committee reports and other business as they neared the end of their two-day meeting tonight.

The Rev. Francis Leiby of Baltimore, the Rev. Francis R. Casselman of Baltimore and the Rev. Robert W. Olwiler of Washington were named chairmen of various synod committees for the coming year.

The Washington Presbytery will meet the same day at Hyattsville church and if the Virginia Presbytery has released Dr. Stroup, expects to place the call in his hands before the meeting is concluded.

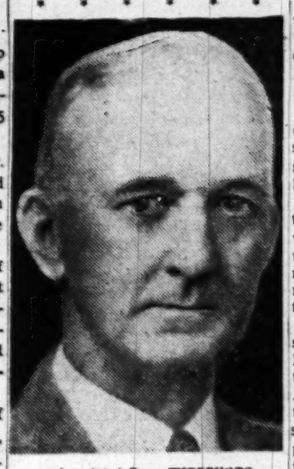
Presbyterians Select Orlando For Site of Meeting in 1951



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DR. BENJAMIN LACY, president of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., was elected moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. at the convention in Massanetta Springs, Va. He was chosen by acclamation

Massanetta Springs, Va., (AP).—The general assembly of the Presbyterian Church, United States (Southern), today selected Orlando, Fla., as the site for its 1951 meeting.

The Rev. Marshall Dendy, pastor, extended the invitation to the assembly to hold its ninety-first session next June in the First Presbyterian Church of Orlando.

Throughout the forenoon today the commissioners were occupied with meetings of standing committees to consider reports and recommendations from various permanent committees and agencies of the church.

Dr. C. Darby Fulton, executive secretary of the Board of World Missions, reported to the assembly today on his visit to Europe during April and May. Discussing conditions in Europe, he said he was not so deeply concerned about Europe's physical indisposition because she is fast recovering from the war's destruction.

"The people," he said, "seem to be recovering from the dismal psychology that followed the war. . . . An air of activity and hopefulness is conspicuous."

He told the assembly, "Protestantism is a force in Europe" and said the Protestant groups there "need our help" to carry on the benevolent work.

IT IS NOT EASY to be a Unitarian, with FREEDOM as the keystone of your religion. Unitarians interpret FREEDOM not merely as "FROM" . . .
FROM creeds
FROM authority
FROM despotism
. . . also as FREEDOM "FOR" . . .
FOR moral and intellectual enlightenment
FOR the realization of our potentialities for goodness
FOR the achievement of the richer and fuller life.

National U. Gives Rayburn an LL.D.

Representative Sam Rayburn, (D., Texas) Speaker of the House of Representatives,, last night was awarded a degree of doctor of laws by National University for dedicating "his life to the highest ideals and principles of American democracy."

The degree was conferred on Speaker Rayburn at the 81st commencement of the university, and was one of two doctorates awarded by Associate Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, as chancellor of the university.

The other doctorate went to John Leo Cassin, who has served as secretary to the university's board of trustees since 1906.

The graduating class numbered 32 candidates for the degree of bachelor of laws, five for master of laws, and one for master of patent law.

Speaker Rayburn, in a brief commencement address, deplored talk of fear of the future of America.

"I have heard talk of subversion in Government for more than 40 years," he said. "I do not know of a single privilege or prerogative that I have surrendered in all those years."

"I wonder," Rayburn continued, "what type of mind it i sthat is always fearful and slightly cowardly to look at tomorrow and say I fear I will not be as free tomorrow as I was today."

In France

D. C. Pastor Named Work Camp Aide

The Rev. L. Maynard Catchings, pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, 17th and P sts. nw., has been named associate director of an international work camp in France during July and August.

Mr. Catchings

The camp is at Chambon sur Lignon. A group of young people from France, Germany and Great Britain will work on rebuilding the College Cevanol there.

It is one of several work camps sponsored by the Congregational Christian Service Committee, working in cooperation with the World Council of Churches and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Mr. Catchings is the first Negro to be appointed a director of one of the camps. He expects to leave only July 10 and return early in September.

Clyde C. McDuffie, a member of Plymouth Church, this week was elected a member of the Congregational Christian Service Committee, which sponsors the work. He is head of the department of foreign languages for divisions 10-13 of the District school system.

Plymouth Church will celebrate the 69th anniversary of its founding on Sunday. At the 11 a. m. service Mr. Catchings will preach on "Plymouth Through the Years."

French Pro-Reds Losing Majority In Workers' Unit

Paris June 9 (AP).—Pro-Communist candidates were falling short of a clear majority today as the tally of votes for social-security administrators neared the halfway mark.

With more than 2,500,000 votes counted of an expected six million to seven million, the major groups had obtained:

General Confederation of Labor pro-Communist)—10,060,138.

General Confederation of Christian Workers (Catholic)—484,045.

Mutualist (nonpolitical)—322,380.

Workers Force (pro-Socialist)—298,575.

The administrators will handle cradle-to-the-grave social security benefits of $3,500,000,000 this year

Methodists Ask Action To Bar A-Weapon Use

Boston, June 9 (AP).—A Methodist commission today called for church action to prevent use of atomic weapons.

The Commission on Social Ethics and World Peace described the use of atomic weapons as "completely immoral and in violation of every instinct of humaneness."

"We believe," the commission said, "that the principles of international action now being given impressive demonstrations in the United Nations are at least a partial moral equivalent for war and international violence."

Students of the Visiting Instruction Corps Graduate

Howard Class Addressed by Lillian Smith

A false peace and inevitable conflict can only result from the "splitting of a man, a nation or the world into fragments and trying to wall them up," Lillian Smith last night told Howard University graduates.

The gray-haired author of "Strange Fruit" stood on the steps before the university's Frederick Douglass Memorial Hall to speak to the 876 graduates, their families and friends. The audience filled the center block-long section of the campus.

Human beings seem to believe that they can avert danger and solve a problem by erecting barriers between themselves and what they label "trouble," whether that trouble be "another man or race of men, a belief, a fear, a memory or a desire," she said.

This segregation, she declared, is "the oldest method known to man of solving human dilemmas and one of the most dangerous."

"It is hard enough to admit that a split man, a schizophrenic, will likely destroy himself. It is almost more than we can endure to admit that the world, split as it is today, can exist for only a few more years.

"Yet deep in our minds we do know—remembering atom bombs and H-bombs—that unless the earth becomes whole, it will be destroyed. And we know it cannot become whole unless enough men become whole to make it so."

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of the university, conferred a doctor of humane letters degree on Roland Hayes, famed Negro tenor.

Warren School

Nine students yesterday received diplomas at commencement exercises at the Warren School in Olney, Md. Headmaster Carle Orestes Warren spoke to the graduates on "Implements of Intelligence."

He urged the students to keep in mind that their real goal should be "not the making of a living, but the making of a life."

Early Closing

Pupils Weep As Central Reaches End

Central High School students wept yesterday as they marched for the last time from the building at 13th and Clifton sts. nw.

The students went out by sections, each led by a teacher, just as other students had entered the building when it was opened 34 years ago.

Teachers said goodby to their classes on the sidewalk.

The early closing came as a surprise to the 1300 junior and senior students. They had expected to remain to the end of the term next Thursday.

Then, by school board action, Central will be disbanded.

The building will reopen in the fall as the Cardozo High School for Negro pupils.

Yesterday students were told to clear out their lockers. Then they were summoned to the auditorium.

Principal Lawrence G. Hoover told them they were dismissed.

The students sang the school song and left as Assistant Principal Lynn F. Woodworth read the roll of sections.

First Assistant Superintendent of Schools Norman J. Nelson said no announcement was made of the early closing for fear of upsetting the students. The dismissal was essential, he said, so teachers can complete records and close out the more than 70-year-old Central institution.

Only one other Central function will be held. That will be the graduation Tuesday at 8 p .m.

Taft Advises Grads To Avoid U. S. Career

Ashland, O., June 9 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), in a commencement address as Ashland College here today advised the 87 graduates to avoid Government work as a career. Civil Service jobs, he said in his commencement address, offer little opportunity for advancement.

7 Handicapped Win Diplomas To Prove Victory Over Fate

The message to the seven graduates was contained in the words of a famous poem set to music.

In a deep baritone, William Graham, senior at Coolidge High School, sang the words of Henley's 'Invictus'—"I am the master of my fate; I am the captain of my soul."

The graduates already had proved the line from the poem: "Under the bludegoning of chance my head is bloody but unbowed."

The seven were physically handicapped youngsters who have received their schooling in the bedrooms of their own homes from teachers of the Visiting Instruction Corps. Yesterday they gathered in the auditorium of the Oyster School for their graduation.

Associate Superintendent of Schools Carl F. Hansen urged the students to take the words from "Invictus" as a guide and to seek success.

That the students already had exactly that in mind was shown by the class prophecy read by Campbell Smith, jr., 6805 Georgia ave. nw.

The prophecy revealed that one of the students plans to be an artist another a radio commentator and others an athropologist, an agricultural scientist with a religious order, an architect and a concert pianist.

Mrs. Elizabeth Goodman, supervisor of the Visiting Instruction Corps, told the graduates that success already had come for at least one former VIC student. William Graham who sang "Invictus" recently won the Hamilton National Bank High School Musical Talent Contest and a scholarship to American University.

Three of the students received high school diplomas from Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, of the Board of Education. They were John Elmer Darling, 5423 8th st. nw.; Joan Mary Dunne, 638 Massachusetts ave. ne.; James Terence Fegan, 1314 Webster st. ne. Four who received junior high diplomas were Dennis Wayne Moore, 5134 Cathedral ave. nw.; James Paul Turner, 918 Longfellow st. nw.; William Melvin Zirkle, 1273 Simms pl. ne., and Campbell Smith, jr.

Reds Reject Act Of U. N. Agency Over China Issue

Geneva, Switzerland, June 9 (AP). Russia and four satellites today rejected a decision of the United Nations Economic and Social Council because Nationalist China took part in it.

The decision, made at Lake Success earlier this year, gave the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions consultative status in sessions of ECOSOC and related organs.

The Communist countries previously had threatened to disregard all decisions made with Nationalist China taking part, but had not contended their absence would prevent any action.

Oilman Denies Imports Major Coal Use Foe

By The Associated Press

A major oil company official told Congress yesterday that oil imports have little, if anything, to do with the troubles coal people claim they have suffered from the overseas competition.

This statement by Charles L. Harding ,director of Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, touched off a fresh dispute in the Senate Labor subcommittee. It previously had heard testimony that foreign oil shipments have caused widespread unemployement not only in coal but also the domestic oil industries.

Senator Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the labor group, bluntly told Harding:

'You cannot make the unemployed coal miners of West Virginia believe that the import of oil at the present rate is not a big factor in coal mine layoffs."

John D. Battle, executive vice president of the National Coal Association, echoed Neely's stand. Battle said there is "no doubt" that 'the flood of foreign oil being dumped on our shores" is to blame for mounting joblessness in the coal fields.

Battle asserted that the oil imports are "disrupting our national fuel economy" and "threatening the security and welfare of the Nation.

He charged that the importing oil companies have slashed the price of the shipped-in fuel oil in order to oust "bituminous (soft) coal from its traditional markets."

But Harding declared there have been "many reasons, other than oil imports, which have accounted for this trend."

"In 1949, for example, the increased use of diesel engines by our railroads was directly responsible for a 33 million-ton reduction in the consumption of bituminous coal," he said.

Ban on U. S. Planes In Cleveland Races

By the United Press

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson has ruled against participation of Air Force and Navy planes in the Cleveland National Air Races this year, it was revealed officially yesterday.

The decision was interpreted in some quarters as all but a death blow to the annual Labor Day air classic which is scheduled for its twenty-first renewal on September 2, 3 and 4.

Snake Has 45 Snakelets, And Still They Come

New York, June 9 (AP).—A 6-foot poisonous snake started having babies at the Bronx Zoo today and didn't seem to know when to stop.

Attendants counted 45 live little wrigglers by mid-afternoon and said there might be dozens more to come.

The mother, a fer-de-lance, arrived from Costa Rica last month. The Zoo's record for this kind of snake is 63 snakelets.

New York, June 9 (AP).—James G. Donovan—a Democrat—was agreed upon today by county Democratic and Republican leaders as their coalition candidate next fall against left-wing Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP., N. Y.). Donovan, 51, is a former Democratic State Senator.

Harrison's 67-139 Leads Open as Old Pros Rally

Nats Get 3 in 9th But Blow 8 to 7 Game to Indians

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats were the victims yesterday of (1) the Cleveland Indians and (2) their own sour performance in a 8-7 ball game that left 5482 Griffth Stadium customers to grumble at the finish.

Bob Feller was the winning pitcher, but he had precious little to do with winning the ball game. The guy who had a lot to do with it was Sam Zoldak, the Indians' fourth pitcher, who walked into the scene with the tying run on third base and one out in the ninth and disposed of the Nats on two pitches.

The Nats managed to stir up three runs in the ninth before surrendering to Zoldak, but they couldn't undo all the damage they'd wrought on themselves in the seventh and eighth when they presented the Indians with five gift runs.

They sabotaged a good pitching job by Chico Marrero in the eleventh inning when Cass Michaels failed to cover second base for the third out and four big Cleveland runs later crossed the plate, wiping out Marrero's 4-2 lead.

Yet they manfully tried to get 'em all back in the ninth and racked up two Cleveland pitchers in that inning before Zoldak took charge. Chick Pieretti couldn't get out any of the four batters he faced. Evans singled to center, Pinchhitter Mele drew a walk, Yost singled to center, Stewart singled to left, and the Nats got two runs back quickly.

When Mitchell bobbled Stewart's hit, the Nats had the two tying runs on second and third with none out. Steve Gromek replaced Pieretti and filled the bases with a walk to Michaels. Noren flied to Kennedy in right scoring Yost, and Stewart romped to third after the catch, with the tying run.

That's when the Indians called in Southpaw Zoldak. The Nats' attack collapsed as fast as they could swing. Bob Ortiz batted for Robertson and fouled out to Catcher Murray on the first pitch. Ostrowski grounded to Boudreau on the next one, and the Indians had the ball game.

The Indians commenced as if to macerate Marrero. Luke Easter banged a homer into the left field seats in the first inning, and in the second, Al Rosen whacked one into the stands in center.

The Nats got a run back in the first inning when Feller opened up by passing Yost and Stewart. With one out, Noren singled home a run.

Marrero settled down nicely and blanked the Indians from the third through the sixth, and the Nats rewarded him with a 4-2 lead. Sherry Robertson doubled off the right field wall for two runs in the third, and in the fourth Yost walloped a homer into the left field stands.

Two were out in the Indians' seventh when Boudreau singled and Marrero lost control, filling the bases on walks to Avila and Pinchhitter Lemon.

The Indians installed Mickey Vernon to pinch hit for Feller, and he grounded to Dente for an apparent easy out, at either second or first. But Michaels was musing about other matters, and the Nats got nobody out on the play, one run scoring.

Dale Mitchell promptly singled to right for two more runs, and after Marrero was lifted in favor of Hittle, Luke Easter produced another run with a single to deep short. They wound up with four runs and a 6-4 lead.

The Indians upped it to 8-4 in

Porterfield's Jaw Broken by Pitch

New York, June 9 (AP).—New York Yankee Pitcher Bob Porterfield suffered a fractured left upper jaw and concussion today when struck in the face by a pitched ball during the New York-Detroit game.

Porterfield was reported in "good" condition tonight at Lenox Hill Hospital. The 25-year-old righthander was hit on the left cheekbone by Detroit's Paul Calvert while batting in the seventh inning. He fell unconscious to the ground and was removed on a stretcher.

Tigers' 8-Run 6th Thumps Yanks, 13-7

New York, June 9 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers broke their shackles today and pulled an old-fashioned trick to snow under the New Yorkers, 13-7, wrapping up the game with an eight-run blast in the sixth inning.

Detroit, in salvaging the final game of the three game series, pounded four Yankee pitchers for 16 hits, including four triples.

A three-run triple by Gerry Priddy sparked a four-run second inning for Detroit and a similar swat with three on by Johnny Lipon high-lighted the Tigers' eight-run splurge.

Dutch Champ In Hawaii And Canada

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MERION GOLF CLUB, Ardmore, Pa., June 9.—If Dutch Harrison, the 36-hole leader, holds on and wins the United States Open Championship tomorrow, he'll qualify as an international champion. He's already won the Canadian Open, Hawaiian Open and finished second in the Philippines Open.

The 40-year-old Harrison has no more loyal rooters here than the golf writers. Weary of hearing players describe their rounds as "I was lucky" or "I had the breaks," they cotton to the drawling Arkansan who says simply: "I hit a helluva tee shot on No. 5 . . . That four-iron shot on No. 9 was a honey . . . nobody in the world could have putted better 'n me today." The guy's got color.

National Celebrities Champion Ben Hogan, who was limping as he approached the eighteenth green to drop a 5-footer for his 69-141, won't play in the PGA championship 10 days hence. "Ten rounds of golf in one week are too much for me," the 1948 pros' champion said.

REPUTATION MEANS nothing in this tournament, as six former Open champions found out today. Eliminated from tomorrow's final round were Billy Burke, Lew Worsham, Lawson Little, Johnny Farrell, Craig Wood and Tony Manero, each an Open winner at one time.

Al Brosch, Garden City, N. Y., failed to qualify for the final 36, but he did qualify as the biggest flop of the tournament. To his three-under-par 67 of yesterday, he added a 14-over-par 84 today.

Lee Mackey Soars to 81, Snead 75; 69 for Hogan

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Merion Country Club, Ardmore, Pa., June 9.—The old pros began to take command today as the National Open Golf Championship reached the halfway mark with the field so closely bunched that any of about 20 players might take the title.

Ernest Joseph (Dutch) Harrison, a big, drawling guy from Arkansas, currently pro at St. Andrews, Ill., will be the pacesetter early Saturday morning for the concluding day's endurance test of 36 holes.

Lee Mackey, jr., the unemployed kid from Birmingham, Ala., who set a new National Open record of 64 in the first round, struggled around in 81 today for a total of 145.

Overnight publicity drew a whopping crowd to Mackey when he started out today. He couldn't stand the pressure. His play on the fourteenth was typical. He shanked a tee shot out of bonds, hit another ball and it was in bounds by only inches. He had teed up a third ball when officials yelled that his second was payable. But he stuck it out and qualified for the final 36.

Harrison was the only starter who broke par for the first rounds. He had a steady if not brilliant 67, three under par, for today's second round, giving him 139, one below par, for two trips around one of the country's toughest courses.

Harrison never has won a major championship, unless the Canadian Open be included in such a category. But he played like the man to beat today. He had five birdies and two bogeys. His longest birdie putt was a 12-footer on the thirteenth green. He used only 30 putts.

He accomplished what is almost the impossible by making a birdie, his fifth, on the most awesome hole on the course, the sixteenth.

This hole is 445 yards long, and the players call it "Hell's Hill." The green is set up on a hilltop and a carry of nearly 200 yards across brambles, brush and mandeep traps is required to reach it.

Harrison hit a tremendous tee shot, and reached the green with a No. 6 iron, stopping 4 feet from the pin and putting in for a birdie 3.

Leading the pursuit of Harrison in Saturday morning's round will be veterans Johnny Bulla and Jim Ferrier, and one of the tournament's newer names, Julius Boros the honeymooner from Southern Pines, N. C. They are tied at 140 even par.

Bulla, one-time airline pilot, also once noted for teeing off in big tournaments with a 35-cent drug store ball, shot today's best round 66, four under par for his 74, 66—150.

Bulla played almost flawless golf. He was not over par on a single hole and used only 29 putts on the tricky Merion greens.

He was out in 35, one under par, and came home in 31, three under. He thoroughly whipped the last five holes, considered one of the hardest finishing stretches in the country. These five holes measure 443, 395, 445, 230, 458, par reading 4, 4, 4, 3, 4. Bulla shot them in one under par with a birdie on No. 14.

Ferrier was around in 69, one

Fazio Shoots 72-145 Worsham Has 76-158

Ardmore, Pa., June 9.—George Fazio of Woodmont Country Club, Washington, D. C., shot a two-over-par 72 in the National Open Golf Tournament here this afternoon to give him a 145 total after a first-day 73.

Lew Worsham, only other Washington entrant, improved slightly over yesterday's score by carding a 76. This gave him a 158 aggregate after yesterday's opening round of 82, and eliminated him from tomorrow's 36-hole plan.

Ed Stewart, shown pulling up at third base in the background, failed to score, however, and the Nats lost, 8-7

Connie Mack Says He'll Sell A's For $5,000,000

Philadelphia, June 9. (U.P.)—Connie Mack admitted today that he woud sell his Philadelphia Athletics to a trucking magnate's syndicate if it can pay the price.

But, the 87-year-old Mack added, the price is "in the neighborhood of five milion dollars and he does not think the group, headed by millionaire trucker Jim Clarke, would pay that much. Clarke, who now owns the Philadelphia Eagles professional football team, revealed Thursday night that he is attempting to purchase the Athletics.

Commissioner Orders St. Louis To Cancel Game With Bums

St. Louis, June 9 (AP).—The owner of the St. Louis Cardinals said today he will ignore an order by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler to cancel a Sunday night game until the club is given a hearing on the matter.

Fred Saigh, the Cardinal owner, told Chandler in a sharply-worded telegram that until he is given a chance to present his case the scheduled contest with Brooklyn Sunday night, July 16, "will remain in status quo."

Later in the day Ford Frick, president of the National League, also ordered Saigh not to play the game. Frick said an amendment to the National League rules adopted last winter prohibits Sunday night games.

"That's not so," Saigh declared. He told a newsman the rule plainly states that a game may be rescheduled on a Sunday night if consent is obtained from the opposing club.

"That's what it says," Saigh insisted, "Anyone can read it."

The Cardinal owner contends that Owner Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Club gave such consent orally. He said Rickey had not withdrawn his agreement to play the Sunday night contest.

Asked what he intended to do in view of Frick's order, Saigh replied: "I don't know. We'll have to wait and see what develops."

The St. Louis owner told Chandler he considered the commissioner's order unfair.

Chandler declined to comment on Saigh's statement.

Saigh's statement taking issue with reasons advanced by Chandler for cancellation of the game was highly unusual for a club owner. The commissioner has the powers of a czar over organized baseball. His word usuallly is regarded as law.

Playing a major league game on a Sunday night while church services are in progress, Chandler said, "would cause us to forfeit the support and good will of thousands of the religious people of this country."

Not so, said Saigh.

"The Cardinals have not received one objection from a churchman or a layman to the Sunday night setting," he wired the commissioner.

"To the contrary, the (ticket) sale is unprecedented, which indicates that the people, the fans, most of whom are church members, are for it 100 percent."

A comparative newcomer to baseball, now in his second season as controlling owner of the Cardinals, Saigh charged Chandler with discriminating against major league clubs.

"If you, as commissioner, hold that the playing of this scheduled Sunday night game would not be in the best interest of baseball, you must hold too that the playing of Sunday night baseball in minor leagues also is not in the best interest of baseball.

"Are you prepared to do that?" The Cardinal president said 59 minor leagues play Sunday night ball.

Mason Takes 12 Shots on One Hole In Open Tourney

Ardmore, Pa., June 19.—Rudolph Mason almost shot his age on one hole here today in the National Open championships.

Mason, at 16 the youngest competitor in the Open, took 12 strokes on the 378-yard eleventh hole at Merion today. He sliced his drive and then hit a seven iron just short of the creek in front of the green. His third, fourth and fifth shots went in the creek. Then he took three penalty shots. His tenth went on the green and he got down in two.

Braves Slam 4 Homers But Cards Win, 8-5

St. Louis, June 9 (AP).—Despite four home runs the Boston Braves fell before a St. Louis Cardinal attack, 8 to 5, tonight.

Three balks by Boston Starter Bob Hall helped the Redbird cause as Walker Cooper homered twice for the visitors and Earl Torgeson and Sam Jethroe hit for the circuit once.

Enos Slaughter hit a four-bagger for St. Louis and Stan Musial slammed out two doubles and a triple in the attack.

All the Boston homers came with the sacks empty.

Lanier, effective except for the home run balls, went out for Gerald Staley in the eighth, but he drew his fifth victory of the season against two defeats.

Chisox Edge Athletics, 3-2, To Escape American Cellar

Philadelphia, June 9 (AP).—Chicago's White Sox escaped the American League cellar as they salvaged the series final from the Philadelphia Athletics, 3-2, tonight with an unearned eighth inning marker providing them with the margin of triumph.

Rookie Bob Hooper was the victim, suffering his fifth loss, as another freshman, Chico Carrasquel, tallied the decisive marker. Carrasquel got a triple with one out in the eighth when Wally Moses missed an attempted shoestring catch.

When Billy Hitchcock muffed Moses' outfield relay, Carrasquel was waved toward the plate.

Roy Campanella's two-run homer in the eighth proved to be the decisive blow although Peewee Reese hit a four-bagger with the bases empty in the ninth. Jackie Robinson and Duke Snider clouted the other homers for Brooklyn.

DEAR FOLKS:

AT DELAWARE.

Jockey Bobby Mitchell suffered head injuries as the result of a training spill and is confined to the Delaware Hospital. Your Host goes in the $25,000 added Kent Handicap. Topping the weekend program. Hecarries 126 pounds, giving away up to 18 pounds for the mile and a sixteenth test. A local racing official lost a bet of a $75 suit to a racing writer the other day. The total wagering for the day being involved. The scribe kidded so much about winning that the official swears he's going to have "Delaware Park" printed on the back of the suit. Apprentice Dick Allgaier rode his 20th winner and loses one of his allowances. Instead of getting 7 pounds off he now gets only 5 pounds. See you on the rail under par, for his total of 71, 69—140, and now is in position to redeem himself for his humiliating finish in the recent Masters tournament. In it he bogeyed five of the last six holes and threw away the title.

Boros, 68 the first day, came back with 72 today, despite a dismal finish. He was three over par on the last three holes, duplicating his fading effort of the opening round.

Ben Hogan tonight stands at 141 with 72-69, and all day Saturday players and spectators alike will be asking, "how's Hogan doing." He's the man to beat, unquestionably.

Until Hogan hit the unyielding "fearsome five" holes on the home stretch, he had a chance to take the lead. He was 3 under par going to the 16th, which he three-putted. He lost another shot when he missed the green on the 230-yard 17th.

Middlecoff Has Another 71

Defending Champion Cary Middlecoff (71-71); Henry Picard, one of the all-time greats (71-7y); Lloyd Mangrum, among the leading money-winners (72-70), and "Skip" Alexander (68-74) were among the 142's, and in excellent position to drive through to the championship.

Johnny Palmer, from Badin, N. C., consistently a contender, was among the 143's with 73-70, while two former champions, Denny Shute (71-73) and Gene Sarazen (72-72) were in the 144 bracket.

George Fazio, Woodmont Country Club of Washington, D. C., was the principal threat in the 145 bracket. Fazio has had rounds of 73-75. Today, at least six of his putts dead on the cup stopped inches short.

Two of the biggest names in the tournament, Sammy Snead and Jim Demaret, apparently were too far back to hope for anything more than a face-saving finish.

Snead was 73, 75—148, and Demaret 73, 77—149.

Snead Ignored

Snead was rapidly becoming the ignored man of the touranment. He had an early starting time today, 9:04 a. m., and only about 50 persons watched him tee off with Ferrier and Jim Turnesa. Later, when the galleries arrived, they took one glance at his score and passed him up for Hogan, who had about 5000 on his heels.

Demaret barely qualified as those with 149 got into the 50 places eligible for Saturday's final play.

their eighth. Hittle walked one man, was replaced by Weik, who finished the damage. With two out he walked Murray, and then was struck for a single by Pieretti that fetched in a run. He also walked Mitchell and was in the process of walking Kennedy when Haynes relieved him on a 2-0 count and finished the pass that forced in another run.

Thus the Nats gave up one run too many.

IN SHORT—Sandalio Consuegra, slender Cuban righthander, will be unveiled by the Nats this afternoon when the White Sox move into Griffith Stadium. He won seven games, lost one, for their Havana farm team . . . Ray Scarborough will pitch one of the games of Sunday's double header for Chicago . . . Home run production is up in Griffith Stadium. Twenty four have been hit already this year, compared to last year's total of 31. Right-handed hitters banged 15 last season, have already totaled 14 . . . Sam Mele's reentry into the Nats' lineup will take place today . . . Ed Stewart's glove was scraping the left field wall in the sixth inning yesterday when he grabbed Bob Kennedy's bid for an extra base hit . . . Luke Easter's first inning homer was a rarity—a line drive swat into the left field stands, by a left-handed hitter.

Rain Slicker Leading Show

3-year-old mare, by the Virginia stallion Wait-A-Bit.

She scored in the lightweight and placed in the open green also under the masterful guidance of "Cappy Smith." Ironically the Green Dunes trainer, Shirley Payne, one of the former foremost of showmen in the Old Dominion, suffered physically from an injured ar mdonated by Rain Slicker in between classes, but proudly displayed the many ribbons his invaders have put in the green and white tack room.

Runabit, though fighting for green hunter recognition, has sewed up the 3-year-old championship for the most sought after award in showing by winning the 3-year-old hunter and lightweight green class and placing in the open green event.

Harrison, Arkansas Traveler, Is Champ in Canada, Hawaii

Jack Stewart, Phoenix, Ariz., auto dealer. Recently his employees presented him with a snappy new set of golf clubs, which he used in the Open Tournament, only to shoot a not-so-snappy 96 today.

GEORGE FAZIO, new pro at Washington's Woodmont Country Club, gained a stroke on himself today with a 72 after his opening day round of 73. Fazio shot everything but par on the first six holes of the back nine, with three birdies and three bogies for that span. He settled down to par golf on the last three holes to complete his 145 for the first 36 holes.

Baseball players who've made only one hit in the first 32 times at bat have a sympathizer in Sam Snead. The sweet swinger from Virginia has scored only one birdie in his last 32 holes. Today's round of 73 included another six, his second in two days. Sam three-putted three greens and explored new territory in the deep rough guarding the fairway on the fifteenth hole, where he took his wretched six.

There's nothing temporary attached to a caddy's job here at Merion. Harry Gibson, who carried Olin Dutra's bag here when Dutra won the Open championship in 1934, is caddying for defending Champion Cary Middlecoff in this tournament.

Although he's suffered a demotion in title since his days at Merion, Jimmy Dykes isn't complaining. He's gone from chief caddy here in 1913 to assistant manager of the Philadelphia A's. The old Merion caddy spends his afternoons watching tournament play.

If Sammy Snead were to have charged the gallery watching him this morning $10 per person, he wouldn't have realized as much money as he gets from a single exhibition match. Less than 50 fans were on hand when Sambo and Jim Ferrier teed off at 9:20 this morning.

Washington's Lew Worsham, 1947 Open winner, improved today, but not enough. He had a second round 76 for 158 and qualified only as a spectator for tomorrow's 36-hole windup.

That the crowd loves a winner was proved quickly this afternoon. Lee Mackey, jr., whose 64 yesterday set an Open record, carried most of the gallery with him when he started out. After bogeying the fourth hole to go three over par, Mackey was as deserted as he was yesterday before he shot his record-breaking score.

Auto, Steel Issues Lead Broad Advance

For the bulk of the market, gains chip stocks shot ahead to new highs in today's market.

Automobile, steel and rail issues took top honors with gains running to around 3 points. Some shares sold at record highs and the market generally hit a four-year peak.

For the bulk of the market gains were smaller, most amounting to less than a point.

Profit taking sales threatened the advance off and on, but were absorbed in good style for the most part. Radio-television issues were a major exception, closing lower after an early rise. Others closed only a little under their best.

Automobile stocks started the ball rolling after a hesitant start. A midmorning burst of demand promptly lifted auto stocks and the rest of the market trailed along. In the afternoon railroad shares, nibbled at timidly yesterday, moved up smartly.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced .6 of one point to 80.1, highest point reached since June 1946. The rail group outdistanced industrials for a change while utilities ran a poor third.

A help to market sentiment was tax action taken in Washington after the close Thursday. The House Ways and Means Committee stood by its decision to cut the period for determining a long-term capital gain from six months to three. The committee did change its mind about altering the 25 percent tax rate on long-term capital gains, an action not entirely unexpected.

Bradley Urges Strong Defense

Federal Housing Administration, explain provisions of new housing legislation and express optimism on future building trends.

"Construction funds and mortgage financing are in good supply," he said. "Builders' plans exceed those of a year ago, and consistent with national trends, Washington builders are planning more lower priced homes. In addition, Washington is fortunate in having available acreage suitable for development, a great deal of which has ready access to utilities.

"Fortunately, too, basic economic conditions are strong—with adequate income, plenty of credit and an abundance of demand."

Reviewing the FHA's 16-year record for the District of Columbia, Richards gave these figures: $584,700,000 loans insured by FHA and only nine foreclosures of single-family homes (all of which have been sold).

Also, he pointed out, the Washington FHA office has insured nearly 339 million dollars in section 608 projects in the D. C. metropolitan area. This involved 46.-500 units. Of these, almost 28,000 units have been completed, about 20,000 units are now under construction, and an additional 7000 may be started.

"The entire 608 program in the District, including both war housing and the veterans' emergency housing program dating back to 1941, will comprise 55,000 units," he said.

Presiding at today's session was Hulbert T. Bisselle of Riggs National Bank, first vice president of the association.

More golfing, a horseshoe pitching tournament, bridge, a reception and a dinner dance concluded today's program.

The bankers face a crowded calendar tomorrow, last day of the convention, which has attracted more than 350 persons. Among the highlights will be election of new officers, committee reports, a talk by Ralph Bradford, executive vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, selection of divisional officers for the American Bankers Association, and the famed "family dinner" at which award winners will be announced.

Maryland Tobacco

Upper Marlboro, Md., June 9 (AP)—Prices continued steady and the volume of offerings continued light on the tobacco auction markets in southern Maryland today.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Maryland Department of Markets reported there was little change in the type and quality of leaf as compared with Thursday.

Offerings were mostly low and fair grade heavy crop, fair and good thin crop, and fair grades of both seconds and tips.

The market ssold 345,266 pounds of tobacco yesterday at an average of $48.69 a hundred pounds, up 32 cents over Wednesday. This brought sales for the year to 17,910,654 pounds at an average of $48.77 a hundred.

The reporters estimated that about half of southern Maryland's 1949 crop, 41 million pounds, had been marketed at the close of the sixth week today. The sales will continue into August.

Some representative prices today:

Heavy crop—Good cherry red, $66, up $1; fair cherry rde, $62, up $2; fair red, $37, up $4; fair green, $17.50, up 50 cents.

Tips—Fair cherry red, 47, down 3; fair red, 29, down 2; fair green, 15, down 1.50.

Seconds—Fine cherry red unchanged at 67; good cherry red, 65, down 1; fair cherry red, 60, down 1.

New York Cotton

New York, June 9 (AP)—Cotton futures closed strong today at gains of $1.35 to $2.30 a bale. All deliveries from October forward reached new season's highs as trade and commission-house buying met only scale-up offerings.

Dallas advices reported thrips (insects) are doing serious damage to cotton in many fields in central and northern parts of Texas and late-planted fields in Gulf coastal areas. Boll weevils were also reported increasing rapidly in some parts of the State.

Census to Hire 4000 Temporary Employes In Next Two Months

The Census Bureau here has begun to hire in large numbers.

It plans to take on a total of 1380 temporary people to work on this year's general census returns before July 1. About the same number will be hired during each of July and August.

The bureau revised its plans downward to provide for a 4000-man temporary staff. The addition of 5500 people here was contemplated up until a short time ago.

Most of the people hired will be located at nearby Suitland, Md. Their jobs will last an average of a year. People for the jobs are being selected from Civil Service registers set up recently from the competitive tests for census clerk and tabulating machine operator. A total of 8738 persons are eligible for the jobs.

Nevertheless, Census officials anticipate a shortage soon of experienced card-punch operators who have passed Civil Service exams. They have a register of 800 persons who have been cleared by Civil Service, and they expect it will be exhausted soon, opening the door to non-status operators. Jobless card-punch operators who have at least six months experience should send Form 57's to Census.

RETIREMENT: The bill passed by the Senate to benefit more than 100,000 Federal workers who retired prior to April 1, 1948, is a major disappointment to many retirees.

Senator Williams (D., Del.) added amendments which would have the effect of reducing annuities of persons in the low pension brackets. For example, a person who retired after 30 years on a $1600 salary is now being paid a $1500 pension. The amendment would cut it to $1230 and back to $1168 if he elected to provide a survivorship benefit for his wife.

An employe whose retirement was based on a $2100 salary would get an annual cut of $120 in his annuity, and a $2400 person would get an $80-a-year cut. The larger the pension the smaller the cut would be under the amendment.

As passed by the House, the bill was intended to give retired people both survivorship benefit rights and either a 25 percent boost in their annuities or $300, whichever was smaller. The April 1, 1948, bill gave them their choice of benefits, one or the other. The Williams amendment would require the retired employes to have their annuities recomputed under the new formula provided in the 1948 act.

NAVY: Its Bureau of Supplies and Accounts will honor its 40, 30, and 20-year employes in a ceremony to be held at 8 p. m. Monday in the Interior Auditorium. A total of 263 employes with nearly 7000 years of Government service will be honored.

The four actively employed 40-year service civilians here are: A. Boyd Custer, Charles Dornoff, Fred Maidens and Jeremiah Stephens. Seven retired employes with 40 or more years of service also will be honored. They are: Edwin M. Barr, Susan B. Dorsey, Jacob H. Hollinger, Kirk Holmes, Emmet Midkiff, Edgar F. Ruark, and Elvin L. Troxel.

JENSEN RIDER: Rep. Mitchell (D., Wash.), yesterday asked the Senate Appropriations Committee to kill the Jensen amendment on the ground that it would disrupt the making of war weapons in Government plants.

The rider, he said, would result in a waste of Federal funds, cause confusion throughout Government, and slow down the defense program. It would limit most agencies to the filling of only 1 of every 10 vacated jobs.

House Group Schedules Vote on D. C. Rent Control

Wednesday Meeting Set; Hearings End; Separate Local Bill Protested by Cain

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) has called the House District Committee to a meeting Wednesday to make its decision on extending District rent control into the period beginning July 1.

McMillan and other members said the future of the District rent control law hinges on the decision of Congress on national rent control. By Wednesday the House District group may have at least the guidance of a Senate decision on the national extension bill.

There were some predictions the committee vote might be very close. But if the committee lines up as it did last year during the House vote on another year of District control, there will be at least 15 votes in the 25-member group for continuing the local rent act.

Both Expire on June 30

The District rent control law, like the national rent control law, expires June 30.

Meanwhile in the Senate Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) worked into his filibuster against the national rent control bill a protest against the plan for District extension advanced by Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.)

Neely, chairman of the Senate District Committee, has filed an amendment for consideration with the national rent bill that would carry District rent control under its own separate law to December 31. Then it could go on to June 30, 1951, provided the District Commissioners between now and the end of this year decided the housing shortage justified the extra period of control.

Want Separate Bills

Members of the House District Committee continued cool to tacking the District rent extension on to the national rent control extension bill, even though the separate laws were retained.

The District Committee held its final hearing on the issue yesterday morning. Washington groups continued sharp division on the proposal for another year of rent control. Building, real estate, landlord and trade groups want rent control to end. Labor and organizations generally representing the tenants' viewpoint are urging rent control be continued.

McMillan said his impression is that rent control should continue here at least as long as elsewhere. But he feels there are some points where the District law should be relaxed.

Two of these have been suggested by District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell and the Commissioners. One would remove controls June 30 from nonhousekeeping furnished rooms. Cogswell said the change also would cover boarding houses and the food they serve. The second change is to let the best available evidence, rather than original records, be used in seeking rent increases.

Subcommittee to Meet

Between now and Wednesday's meeting, the rent control hearing subcommittee is expected to meet and decide what its report will be. Acting subcommittee chairman Thomas G. Abernethy said he would call the meeting as soon as possible.

Yesterday the Board of Trade joined with the Homebuilders Association of Metropolitan Washington and other groups in urging the end of rent control. Witnesses included Ernest F. Henry, Lewis T. Breuninger and Rufus S. Lusk.

Extension of control was urged by Mrs. Hilda Cloud of the Washington Housing Association; Mrs. Gertrude Evans of the Progressive Party, Mrs. Jane Palmer, of the District Industrial Union Council, CIO and Miss Kate Alfriend, of the Washington Americans for Democratic Action.

Automatic Rent Increase

Mrs. Katherine H. Gunion, 3403 Macomb st. nw., proposed liberalizing the law to include an automatic rent increase, Miss Julia H. Thorwarth of 1320 Park rd. nw. said it was high time landlords were given fair play by ending control.

Others who asked the end of control included Paul J. Miller of the Washington Guest House Association; F. F. Lewis, owner of an apartment at 1635 R st. nw., and James Dawn of 530 Madison st. nw.

Ely Is Elected Bar Unit Head

Nathaniel J. Ely has been elected chairman of the administrative law section of the D. C. Bar Association, it was announpnced yesterday. Ely, who is 40, has served the last two years as secretary of the section. He resides with his wife and two daughters in Rosemary Hills, Montgomery County.

Other officers elected include Ben S. Fisher, who is retiring chairman, named delegates director to the bar association; Clarence M. Charest, vice chairman; Jules G. Korner 3d, secretaary; Fred W. Albertson and Karl Michelet, council members for three-year terms.

2½-Year-Old Bullet Victim Cheats Death

The Washington Post
BRENDA WOOD
. . . recovers from bullet wound

Brenda Wood, 2½, is both plucky and lucky.

Given a slim one-to-five chance to live May 12, after a bullet pierced her abdomen, she is about ready to go home from Arlington Hospital now, according to her doctor.

Brenda's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Wood of 1003 Westmoreland dr., Falls Church, said they believed the wound was caused by the child's 4-year-old brother, Richard.

The two children were playing alone in a bedroom of their home when the accident occurred, apparently with a .22 caliber rifle that Richard had pulled off a closet shelf.

Brenda's doctor, William R. Moses, worked 50 minutes over her on the operating table, repairing damage by the bullet, which pierced her intestine in five places.

In addition, Brenda received "just about everything" in the way of drugs, including penicillin, streptomycin, aureomycin and chloromycetin. She also received several pints of blood and a unit of plasma.

Despite two weeks on the "critical" list, Brenda has been getting well so fast lately, Dr. Moses believes she'll be home early next week.

Two passengers in an automobile were hospitalized when their car collided with a truck at 16th and V sts. nw. at 10:45 a. m.

Admitted to Walter Reed Hospital were Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Nowak, 26, who suffered lacerations of the face and forehead and a possible fractured of the skull, and Patricia Nowak, 3, with possible head injuries. They were in a car driven by Lieut. George N Nowak, 28, of Alexandria, Va.

Woman Tells Of Abortion Bribe Offer

Free Trip Proposed To Keep Her Off Stand, Jury Hears In Doctor's Trial

Pretty Miss Floria M. Huffman, 26, who says Dr. William A. Goodloe performed an abortion on her, testified yesterday that she was offered a free trip to California if she would not be a witness.

She said that offer was made April 22 by Miss Alice L. Galusha, a People's Drug Store employe. But Miss Huffman never said that Dr. Goodloe's name was mentioned specifically in connection with the proposal. The reference was to "that man" who had "influence in Washington."

Dr. Goodloe is charged with performing the abortion and with trying to obtruct justice. Awaiting a separate trial is Miss Galusha, accused of acting as Dr. Goodloe's intermediary in the bribery attempt.

Miss Huffman testified at length yesterday before a jury and Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

She said she discovered she was pregnant after having relations November 5 with an Army captain named Andrew Gleason. She denied having intimate relations with him since that date.

The abortion, she declared, was performed here on February 4. She was interviewed by police after she went to Gallinger Hospital after suffering a severe hemorrhage.

Another witness was Dr. James Pair of Baltimore, who could not testify as to details from memory, but recalled events after shown a statement given police.

He said that in April, Dr. Goodloe came to his Baltimore office with a "young lady" and that Dr. Goodloe at that time said someone had complained about an abortion to Washington police. The "young lady" was going to try to persuade the complainant not to continue prosecution, Dr. Pair quoted Dr. Goodloe as saying.

County Group Asks Delay on Office Building

The Montgomery County Civic Federation last night opposed construction of the proposed $1,200,000 county office building in Rockville pending further study of size and location of the structure.

In another action, the federation recommended an increase of $200 a year in the pay of county police, instead of the $100 increase proposed by the county personnel board.

The police salary recommendation was adopted after Milton A. Smith, Bethesda lawyer, pointed out that police performance standards had been compared in a report with those of the Nassau County (N. Y.) police force. But when it came to salary comparisons, he said, the report, made by the International Association of Police Chiefs, used the pay of Arlington (Va.) police as a basis of comparison.

Smith was supported by Einar Christensen, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, who said the board had urged increases to the level of salaries paid to Washington Metropolitan Police.

Present pay of privates in Montgomery County starts at $2600 and ranges to $3400.

The proposed county building construction was defended by County Manager Irving G. McNayr, who told federal members that offices in the present building are "bursting at the seams." He said rented quarters are now costing the county $25,000 anually, a sum which he said could cover interest costs on a loan for the new structure.

A resolution was adopted urging the county council to appropriate $9,115,900 for county operating expenses for the fiscal year beginning July 1, as compared to the $9,053,025 sum recommended by the county manager last month. The difference would pay for the higher police salary increases, and for $30,000 which the federation urged be added to the emergency fund.

The federation also recommended a capital budget of $9,023,700 for the fiscal year, a tax rate of $1.95 and a suburban tax rate of 15 cents.

Judge to Rule In Suit Over Gas Rate Hike

District Court Judge T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday said he would rule Tuesday on the legality of the November order of the Public Utilities Commission granting a 6.14-percent rate boost to the Washington Gas Light Co.

The legality of the order is being contested by Vernon A. Baker, Interstate Commerce Commission lawyer, acting as a private citizen.

Judge Goldsborough heard arguments yesterday from Baker, replying to earlier arguments by Lloyd Harrison, PUC attorney, and C. Oscar Berry, representing the gas company.

The Federation of Citizens Associations, which had filed the appeal with Baker, was held by Judge Goldsborough to lack the legal status required to prosecute the appeal. Baker is chairman of the federation's public utilities committee.

Judge Solomon Not a Communist, Witnesses Testify

Gus J. Solomon, Federal District Judge in Oregon, denied to a Senate committee yesterday that he is a Communist and said he absolutely opposes communism.

Daniel C. Mahoney, a Portland Federal Court law clerk, testified Monday and again yesterday that he believed Solomon was a Communist.

Solomon's statement to a Senate Judiciary Committee was supported quickly by two Senators, a prominent Portland lawyer, and the State's Republican national committeeman, also a lawyer.

The witnesses were Senators Morse (R., Oreg.), and Kefauver (D., Tenn.), Ralph L. Davies, Portland lawyer, and Ralph Cake, Oregon Republican national committeeman, also a lawyer.

They said they had known Judge Solomon for years, and were convinced he is a loyal American, a man of complete honesty and integrity and one utterly opposed to everything communism stands for.

Police Seize 3 More Firemen As Firebugs

Total of 7 Charged With Setting 13 Blazes In Prince Gebrges

County police yesterday arrested three more Prince Georges County volunteer firemen in connection with 13 house and barn fires in the Forestville area.

Hearings against four firemen arrested earlier were continued yesterday in Marlboro courts to permit police to complete their investigations.

Arrested yesterday were Arthur James Stacey, 22, of Parkland, and two juveniles, aged 16 and 14. Stacey was charged with "unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to unoccupied dwellings and barns." Juvenile charges were preferred against the others.

The damage toll may be as high as $40,000, police said, in all of the fires.

The firemen arrested previously are Willy D. Grusholt, 19, of Forestville; William D. Tippett, 20, and Thomas A. Marlowe, 18, both of Suitland, and a 16-year-old juvenile.

All of the fires, occurring between April 18 and May 31, were set between 9 p. m. and 3 a. m., according to police. Evidence showed they were started with gasoline.

Term Suspended

Judge's Ire Is Tempered In Mute's Case

Great was the wrath of Judge Alexander Holtzoff at the numbers writer before him, but then justice gave way to mercy.

The defendant was Willie Wolfe, 60, of 40 L st. nw., the father of eight children, a mute, partially paralyzed, and no stranger to the numbers racket. He can't read or write—that is, read or write anything but numbers.

He had pleaded guilty to operating a numbers lottery last March and was up for sentence before Judge Holtzoff yesterday. He had received a year's probation for a like offense in 1947.

Judge Holtzoff sternly observed that Wolfe was arrested again Thursday for doing the very same thing. He said that the repetition of offenses was shocking and that something would have to be done.

"But I have not the heart to put a mute with eight children dependent on him in jail," said the judge. "You're not going to write any more numbers, are you, Wolfe?"

The defendant nodded his head vigorously.

"He means, 'never again'," said his attorney, H. Clifford Allder.

"Oh, well," said Judge Holtzoff. "I will set aside the plea of guilty to the felony of operating a lottery and allow the defendant to plead guilty to the misdemeanor of possession of numbers slips. The sentence is a suspected sentence of 30 days and a year's probation."

Mrs. Moncure Says She Left Husband Because of Fear

Mrs. Phyllis Moncure, 31, engaged in a court fight with her husband for a divorce and custody of the couple's three children, testified yesterday she left her husband in 1945 because she was "deathly afraid" of him.

Her 48-year-old husband, Arlington real estate man Richard C. L. Moncure, has accused her of willful desertion and abandonment in a suit filed in Arlington Circuit Court.

Mrs. Moncure, in a cross suit, says her husband treated her with violence, threatened her life, and also threatened to put her in a mental institution. She asks alimony plus custody of their three children, aged 5, 9 and 10.

In her testimony yesterday, Mrs. Moncure said her husband was "violent—always over nothing" before their separation in 1945.

Two witnesses for Moncure testified yesterday that the children were receiving excellent care from their father.

Mrs. Moncure's brother, Charles C. Smith, 719 Hallwood ave., Falls Church and her sister Mrs. Charlotte Hunt of 5708 41st ave. Hyattsville also took the stand. They testified that Moncure was good to his family in a material way but said he showed more devotion to his mother than his wife.

In her suit Mrs. Moncure charges her husband's mother Irene Moncure "controlled his complete marital life."

Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Arthur Sinclair who is hearing the case because both Arlington Circuit Court judges have disqualified themselves took the case under advisement late yesterday.

Father of 9, Ill, in Debt, Drowns at Hains Point

Baker, 41, Follows Example of Friend 'Ryebread' Shulman; Family Stunned

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

The body of Joseph Enoch Clarke, 41, father of nine children, was found yesterday in Washington Channel off Hains Point.

Burdened by financial difficulties and ill health, Clarke nevertheless seemed happy when his family last saw him Thursday night.

For his oldest child, Betty, 13, was scheduled to graduate the next evening from St. Dominic's Catholic grammar school. With fatherly pride he had taken a 15-pound cake to the school Thursday afternoon.

Yesterday, at 8 a. m., his stunned family received the news of his death at their modest brick row house at 633 H st. sw.

"As Good As a Poor Man Can Be"

"I can't understand it. He was a good husband, as good as a poor man can be," Mrs. Clarke sobbed, as her children looked on, the younger ones unable to realize what had happened.

"He loved his children so much and spent as much time as he could with them. And they loved him. We were all a happy family."

She said he left for work Thursday night at Ottenberg's Bakery, where he was employed part-time on the night shift, after she had fixed him a lunch of sandwiches and milk.

Police said he did not go to work. Instead, he visited his brother, John Clarke, who later said he seemed despondent.

Police Find Clothing

Early yesterday, two Park Policemen, Walter Lang and William Cameron, found Clarke's outer clothing folded neatly over a rail at Hains Point.

They notified Harbor Police, who dragged the river for only a minute before recovering Clarke's body. He was wearing only underwear.

His car, with the lunch untouched in it, was found about a mile back from the point near the East Potomac Park golf clubhouse. He had apparently walked to the point, where the water was deepest. His family said he could not swim.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he will withhold a certificate of death pending the results of a chemical analysis of stomach contents.

Friend of Gambler's

Police said Clarke had been friendly with Robert (Ryebread) Shulman, 39-year-old gambler who took his life by jumping into the river off Hains Point last month. Shulman had worked for bakeries here for many years.

Clarke had told friends, after Shulman's death, that Shulman "was a lot better off," police said. They added that Clarke had also told friends if he "didn't get straightened out, he would go overboard, himself."

Police said Clarke had worked for a bakery in Arlington but had lost his job recently and had been out of work for about five weeks before getting the part-time job with Ottenberg's Bakery. They said he was suffering from hernia and complications.

2 Months Behind in Rent

Mrs. Clarke said her husband had been forced to drop one insurance policy during his unemployment and that he left the family only a $500 policy. She said the family is about two months behind in the rent and has a large grocery bill to meet.

As grief-stricken Mrs. Clarke started preparations last evening for funeral services, the young children played around unable to realize their father was not coming home.

The Clarke children are, besides Betty: Barbara, 13; Beverly, 11; Joseph, 10; James, 8; Jo Ann, 6; Deretha, 5; Charles, 3, and Patricia, 11 months.

Betty quietly got ready for last night's graduation. The sisters at St. Dominic's had persuaded her to take part in the exercises.

"It is what her Daddy would have wanted," the family explained.

D. C. Physicians May Obtain $1 Virginia Permits July 1

Beginning July 1, District physicians may obtain permits for $1 a year, instead of the present $50 fee, to treat patients in nearby Virginia.

Beginning date of the new policy, authorized last winter by the Virginia General Assembly, was announced here yesterday by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District Health Officer and secretary-treasurer of the District Commission on Licensure, Healing Arts Practice. He said he had been informed of the impending change by the Virginia State Board of Medical Examiners, which will issue the permits.

The Commission on Licensure will probably act Monday on a reciprocal agreement, Seckinger said.

Maryland and the District have an agreement under which physicians may cross the District Line for a $1 fee. The District has also let Virginia physicians treat patients here under permits costing $1 and good indefinitely. The high fee charged by Virginia rankled Washington physicians.

Last fall, in a move designed to force a change in the Virginia procedure, the Commission on Licensure required Virginia physicians to obtain a $1 permit for each case.

The new law provides that District physicians renew their permits for $1 each year. They must still pay the $50-a-year fee to maintain offices in Virginia.

Paris Fashion Experts Plan Low-Cost, Mass Production

By Carter L. Davidson

Paris, June 9 (AP).—The high-fashions of Paris, "big name" labels and all, are going on the assembly line.

Five of the top fashion houses, where royal ladies and millionaire's wives rub shoulders to pay four-figure sums for gowns, have struck a deal to put their frocks into mass production. The result will be dresses with famous labels on the shoulders of shopgirls and waitresses for about $30 a copy.

The five big names of the fashion world who are going into the mass production are Jean Desses, Hollywood favorite Jacques Fath, and Designers Paquin, Robert Piguet and Carven.

The scheme, due to be in operation next month, was devised by Jean Gaumont-Lanvin and Marcel Dhorme, makers of sportswear and light summer resort frocks.

Under the plan, each of the given designers will contribute seven models, including two suits, two sports coats, two simple dresses and a raincoat or topcoat.

The 35 models then will be adapted to mass production by a factory near Paris.

A major store in each large city in France, outside of Paris, will be stocked with the 35 models, and the designers will be paid royalties for each number sold bearing their label.

All five designers also will sell their own models in their "boutiques" (shops) maintained in conjunction with their Paris fashion salons.

Jean Desses, one of the five, explained today that "If the idea catches on in France, it will spread to other countries of Europe, and eventually to the United States."

The dresses will be produced to sell from 10,000 to 12,000 francs (about $30 to $35) each. That's about a third the cost of the cheapest number now available with a big name designer's label.

Desses explained that business in high fashion this year "is greater than ever; it's really good," but added "the handwriting is on the wall."

PETUNIA!

I try to whistle cheerfully,
But all to no avail.
Life is mighty dreary
When the coffee's weak and stale!

But you can freshen that coffee considerably, Petunia, by spreading it in a shallow pan, placing it in a hot oven for a few minutes, then preparing as usual.

If you have that far away look in your eyes...

MAYBE you're dreaming of a quiet little resort by the sea, where you can spend those precious vacation days resting, swimming and soaking up sunshine. Or you might have a cool mountain camp in mind, with fishing, hiking and a gorgeous view of the valley. Then again, you may want to go to a lively new spot, where you can meet people, go places and have fun. Or you would choose an ideal place for your children . . . go abroad . . . travel.

Whatever your vacation dreams are, you'll find it helpful to look over a Special Travel Section at home on Sunday, for instance, when you've got plenty of time to ponder over these places. Then your dreams can take shape as you see the advertisements for actual resorts, read the articles about them and look at the pictures of them. Before long, you'll have chosen the vacation land that will make your dreams come true. So if you've got that far away look in your eyes, you ought to see . . .

With the State Societies

California Is 100 and Proud of It

By Nicha Soure

One hundred years of progress is ample cause for jubilation and the California State Society will celebrate fittingly on the State's one hundredth birthday.

The Centennial Ball will be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel on Saturday, June 17.

Blonde 19-year-old Nancy Whittemore Edwards will reign as queen at the Centennial Ball. Miss Edwards, the daughter of Mrs. E. A. Evans, wife of Brigadier General Evans, was California's princess at the Cherry Blossom Festival. General Evans is president of the Reserve Officers Association.

Another high spot of the program will be native Hawaiian dances by Miss Beverly Farrington, daughter of the Delegate from Hawaii and Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington.

An added attraction to the Centennial Ball will be the National Ballet Company's presentation of "Prater," an original Viennese character ballet set to the music of Johann Strauss. John Sergieff, ballet master, announces this will be the first appearance of the group since their reorganization as the National Ballet.

Tickets are available at the Francis Scott Key Bookshop in Georgetown, the Better Mouse Trap in Alexandria and at the Statler Hotel after 2 p. m. on the day of the ball. Tickets may be obtained also by calling Mrs. Clair Engle at DE. 9119.

The National Press Club is staging a bangup Texas affair and has invited the men of the Texas State Society of Washington to take part.

It will be a genuine Texas barbecue on June 17, from 1 p.m. until dark, at Fort Hunt on the Mount Vernon boulevard.

John Snider, the "Barbecue King of Amarillo," is coming up from the Panhandle with his chuck wagon and cowboy cooks to take care of the food. On the afternoon's program will be a debate between Senator Tom Connally (from Texas, of course) and Ohio's Representative Clarence Brown.

Parade of 'High Brass'

The U. S. Navy Band, directed by Comdr. Charles Brendler, will start the program at 1 p. m. with a Nation-wide radio concert. There will be a parade of the Kentucky Colonels, Nebraska Admirals, Texas Admirals and the Press Club's own Foreign Legion.

As if these weren't enough drawing cards to the barbecue, the afternoon get-together will feature several horse acts, an Indian war dance, and a baseball game between the Eighty-first Congress and the Press Galleries battling for the baseball championship of Capitol Hill.

Private cars will find parking space at Fort Hunt. Special buses will leave F st., 14th and 15th sts. nw., fom noon to 12:15 p. m. on June 17. Bus tickets must be obtained in advance from the Press Club office.

Members of the Massachusetts Society of Washington have been invited to attend a special luncheon at the Capitol on Bunker Hill Day Saturday, June 17.

She was a member of the League of American Pen Women and active in missionary prayer circles, her son said. She attended the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church.

Mrs. Dennett, a graduate of Colby College, was the widow of Charles D. Dennett, Maine insurance man, who died in 1918. She is survived by her son.

Memorial services are tentatively scheduled for 4 p. m. Sunday at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Memorial services will be held Tuesday in Bangor.

How to Act in a Foreign Land

A Country Is Always Judged By Its Traveling Public

This is the last of a series of articles intended to make your vacation more pleasurable. The series was condensed from "Your Trip Abroad," published by Doubleday & Co. The author is president of the Travel Writers' Association and travel editor of Esquire magazine.

By Richard Joseph

CHAPTER SIX

America is by far the greatest country on earth—in every possible, imaginable way.

We Americans know more about more different things than anybody else in the world.

We have more money than a Mexican, our plumbing is better than a Frenchman's, our climate is far superior to an Englishman's, little Costa Rica would be lost on a good-sized Texas ranch, our Radio City Music Hall makes the San Carlo Opera House in Naples look like a neighborhood movie.

At least, that's what a lot of returning travelers have to say.

If that's what you're setting out to prove by your travels, maybe it would be better if you just took their word for it and stayed home.

Your travels abroad are sure to give you a realization of how lucky you are to be living in this rich, prosperous, fortunate country of ours.

But they should also have given you an understanding of some of the rest of the world and an appreciation of the fact that we can learn something from everybody.

Right now we in America are engaged in a great selling job—we're trying to sell most of the peoples of the world on the advantages of our way of life. One of the most important products of a society is its people. America and the American democratic system are being judged partly on a basis of the sort of people we send abroad as our ambassadors—not the official variety, but principally our tourists nad businessmen.

Golden Rule

That's why you have certain duties you can't escape while you are abroad—even though you've been planning this vacation for years as your own personal means of escape from all obligations. And yet the obligations aren't too onerous. They consist chiefly of observing the Golden Rule.

You'll find—if you keep an open mind about it—that people you meet abroad are pretty much like the people you know at home, not much better, not much worse.

Some of the suggestions:

Conform with local customs. This doesn't mean taking on an extra wife in Saudi Arabia or cheering Franco in Spain. But you should do your best to fall in with the established local dining customs, social amenities, and general habits of dress. Don't demand meals in restaurants at odd hours, don't be a "bone-crusher" where the weak, tender handshake is the custom. Don't wear shorts where a native would never think of doing so.

Avoid bragging, loudness, and arrogance. Look around you at home. When you realize how distasteful these traits are in your own countrymen, you will never think of displaying them in the presence of strangers.

Try to pick up at least a few words of the language of the country you are visiting. But always be sure of what you are saying. Never resort to "pidgin" talk or use the words you do know in a loose manner.

Don't flaunt your money; learn to spend it as the natives do. In practically every country you will visit, wages and salaries are lower than they are in the United States.

Avoid arguments. Of course, as you become more intimate with the people you are visiting, there will be differences of opinion, but short of defending your honor, save the arguments until later.

Be careful with the women. (This advice is for men only). In almost all the popular tourist countries, women have won a high degree of emancipation, but it does not always follow the same lines as in our country.

Don't haggle. The assumption that every tradesman and merchant automatically marks up his wares for tourists is not generally true. In those places where haggling is the practice, get the merchant's price, then make your offer. Either settle on the difference or move on.

Be moderate. It is rare to find drunkenness outside the United States in any but the lowest specimens. One inebriate American can do more to destroy our national prestige than a thousand "good" tourists can do to build it up.

Be friendly. Treat all the people you meet in foreign lands with decency and courtesy. Don't exaggerate the differences between you and your hosts. Be extravagant in complimenting food, architecture, climate, traditions.

WTTG Got Its Name From a Researcher

"I NEVER had room in my garage for a car," says Allan Dumont, who used the space for homework on inventions after he left his job at Westinghouse each evening—10 useful inventions in his first three years out of college, that was his score for Westinghouse. His father was a businessman, treasurer of the Ingersoll Watch Co.—but Dumont, as a businessman, still uses the inventor's sliderule he carries in his pocket, to figure dollars and cents.

DUMONT

"I can't add and subtract on a sliderule—but I can divide and multiply, and that's the job of an inventor!"

One out of every 10 people on his payroll today is employed in research—350 of the 3500, a very high percentage in any industry. Along the way, Dumont spent every dime of his savings, mortgaged his house, borrowed on his insurance. At the end of his first year as a "business," his books show that he had three and a half employes—"oh, yes, we had a chemist working part time!"

TOTAL SALES that first year were two cathode ray tubes to colleges. By 1938 he began making television receivers, hired 40 people, lost over $8000. By 1942 he was $200,000 in debt. By making radar equipment for the Government during the war, he kept his factories working—but reconversion cost him one million dollars.

Guts, gumption, and gambling finally paid off—Dumont sales of television sets and equipment should total 80 million dollars this year, doubled each year since 1947. Undiplomatically, we asked if the Dumont Network is still losing money:

"You bet!" But he spoke with the spirit of a man who whipped polio when he was 14, has never had an ulcer, and runs a factory without time clocks: "Something else I'll bet you—we're losing less than any other network!"

THE CALL LETTERS of his New York station are WABD—the last three letters are the initials of his own name, Allen B. Dumont; but before you conclude he is trying to grab the glory, look at the call letters of his Washington outlet: WTTG—for Thomas Toliver Goldsmith, his director of research. The men who still work in "The Pickle Factory"—so named because that's what it used to be before it cradled television—know that their boss still speaks their language.

A rebel as well as a pioneer, he has his own ideas about color television: "Color? I don't believe in stirring up people before you can give them something. But for my money, I think that Washington 'freeze' has been clamped on television for the past 20 months, because the Federal Communications Commission is on strike. If any other industry were stopped dead in its tracks for that long, you'd hear a howl clear across the country!"

Though he was once chief engineer for Lee de Forest "Father of Radio," Dumont now predicts its conquest by television: "Look at the figures in New York—on January 1, 1949, the ratio was 87 percent radio to only 13 percent television audience. Today it's 52 and 48. In a few years the ratio will be reversed, and after that . . . figure it out for yourself."

BORN and raised in Brooklyn, Dumont today lives up to the French origin of his name—"my house is on top of a mountain, one of the highest points in New Jersey . . . perfect for television reception . . ."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Words of Wisdom (?) For June Grads

This is the season of the year when schools and colleges start turning loose on the world their annual crop of graduates.

Some of these young people are destined to become Presidents and Congressmen. Some will end up in skid row.

In the old days, we didn't have the confidence of modern youth. We conceded that no man could foretell in which category we'd wind up. So there was a certain humility in our manner as we went out to look for that first job.

But these days, it's a different world. The personnel manager asks, "What experience have you had?" and the applicant counters with, "What are the hours, and is your pension plan contributory or non-contributory?"

The boss wants somebody who will learn his business, and the June graduate wants to know how long he'll have to wait for his first raise. And "Are you open on Saturday?"

Those of us who started to work in depression years, or even in normal times, know that what's distorted the viewpoint of today's young folks is the war and post-war boom. They think it's always been like this, and always will be.

I hate to disillusion them with unsolicited advice that makes me out to be a foxy grandpa with specs on my nose. But I think somebody ought to take the graduates aside and give them some straight dope. It might go like this:

Above all, remember that the world doesn't owe you a living; but you do owe the world something. You owe it a moral obligation to contribute something useful and worthwhile.

Don't start with the idea of getting the greatest reward for the least amount of work. That cheats you, not the boss.

Start where you have a chance to contribute most, and to make yourself most valuable. You'll not only earn a feeling of accomplishment—but more money as well.

You'll be much better off on your first job than your father and grandfather were. That's because our living standards have been raised through increased productivity.

But you haven't produced anything yet, and you can't expect to start on a par with men and women who have worked for decades to get what you'd like to have. There's no royal road to accomplishment.

When you're older, and you've carried your share of the load for awhile, you'll maybe get to be half as smart as you think you are today.

You'll realize that some things we learn from books, and some things we don't. And one of the things we don't is outlined in the sentence just before this one. But I'm sure you won't take my word for it until you learn it for yourself.

"Will the tenants who entertain guests between the hours of 11 p. m. and 4 a. m. either have them remove their shoes or buy rugs? It is annoying to the other tenants."

Veep Exchanges Domestic Notes

By Drew Pearson

The Senate's genial chaplain, the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, and Vice President Alben Barkley were exchanging domestic intelligence in the Senate cloakroom.

Barkley

"My wife's away in St. Louis for two weeks," reported Barkley.

"I'm in the same boat," said the chaplain. "My wife's out of town, too."

"Well, let's do something about it," suggested the Veep with a wink. "They'll never know the difference. How about a little pinochle or a night baseball game at Griffith Stadium?"

Brass Bosoms

The Italian Embassy celebrated the anniversary of the founding of the Italian Republic last week by bestowing medals on several people around the White House, among them Gen. Harry Vaughan, Gen. Louis Renfrow and Gen. Wallace Graham, the President's personal physician.

The medals were supposed to be for "contributing to the development of friendly relations between Italy and the United States."

However, here is what these three recipients did to improve "friendly relations" between the United States and Italy:

GENERAL RENFROW—When four American Legionnaires patriotically gave their time and money to visit Italy to present the tide of toys to Italian children, General Renfrow refused them passage on an Air Force plane. The Secretary of Air and the top generals of the Air Force OK'd the trip; but General Renfrow said no. Apparently the Italian Embassy thought this merited a medal.

GENERAL GRAHAM—At the height of European starvation, when the United States was buying food to send to the people of Italy, General Graham used his inside knowledge as a White House aide to speculate in the food which we were sending to Italy. He also was rewarded by the Italian government.

GENERAL VAUGHAN—In 1946 when the Italian people were starving and the American people were holding themselves down to one or two slices of bread daily, General Vaughan phoned the Agriculture Department demanding that American whisky distillers get a bigger grain quota at the expense of the Italian and European people.

When the Agriculture Department refused to yield, General Vaughan got nasty and claimed it was his prerogative to fix grain-liquor quotas.

Vaughan also pulled various other deals which the Italian government apparently considered meritorious. He favored race track construction at the expense of veterans' homes. He pulled wires for his friend John Maragon when Maragon was charged with smuggling. He also behaved so badly in regard to other matters that he won an official spanking from a Senate investigating committee.

Therefore, on the anniversary of the founding of the Italian Republic, General Vaughan was awarded the Star of Solidarity, as a reward for promoting friendly relations between the United States and Italy.

NOTE—An increasing number of Congressmen are concluding that George Washington was right when he banned all foreign medals to American officials. Since General Vaughan got his famed medal from Argentina, that country has received a 125-million-dollar Export-Import Bank credit.

Merry-Go-Round

Out in Oregon, where distances are long and the population sparse, the live-wire community of Medford recently staged a campaign to buy a "Mercy Airplane" or flying ambulance. The pilots, copilots, nurses, attendants serve without pay, and leave their jobs to fly the ill from various isolated areas into larger cities. Real servants of brotherhood! . . . Majority Leader Scott Lucas has a tough time riding herd on the Senate. Bane of his existence is absenteeism—which applies chiefly to younger Democrats. They are constantly playing hookey. . . . Heard in the Commerce Department press room: "They're installing no-left-turn signs at the White House. Does that apply to Truman? . . . Capitol correspondents have decided that the term "pork barrel" doesn't do justice to the big, one-package appropriation of 27 billion dollars for domestic spending. They call it the "silo" bill. . . . Incidentally, the one-package idea will be junked by the next Congress—too unwieldy . . . While sifting through the 1700 "secret documents" in the Amerasia case, Senate investigators came across one paper labeled: "Jumbo Secret! Destroy Before Reading!" . . . Former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau is now out of the hospital—a heart attack resulting from too much pressure during the war years. . . . The University of Colorado alumnus medal for outstanding public service, awarded posthumously last year to Supreme Court Justice Wiley Rutledge, this year is being presented to Lee Johnson of the National Public Housing Conference for his untiring campaign for legislation to lick the housing shortage.

Big Campaign Dough

It was only a few years ago that the United States Senate refused to seat Vare of Pennsylvania, Smith of Illinois and Newberry of Michigan because they spent large amounts of money in their primary or election campaigns.

Smith of Illinois was not seated for spending $100,000. But now, in the same State, the Republican citizens finance committee, headed by oil man Kent S. Clow, and organized largely to defeat Senator Scott Lucas, brazenly announced that it was going to raise $700,000 for the November campaign.

This caused GOP Congressman Charles Vursell of Salem, Ill., to remark that the $700,000 would be a good investment if it would prevent Lucas from returning to the Senate.

The citizens committee's $700,000 will be on top of the campaign chest raised by the Republican State Committee and the Republican National Committee; so that the Illinois election should really be rolling in dough.

Meanwhile, lethargic Senator Guy Gillette of Iowa has been appointed chairman of a committee to investigate campaign expenditures. Gillette clamored for Senate investigators in Iowa when he was the object of the Roosevelt purge in 1938, but now he isn't the eager-beaver he used to be.

However, the country generally is getting fed up with the tremendous amounts of money spent on elections. People are getting the impression that the man with the dough can buy his way into Congress—not a healthy impression to prevail in a democracy.
